PREFACE

THIS manual is designed for two uses. It may be used, first, by students of composition for reference, at the direction of the instructor, in case of errors in themes. Second, it may be used for independent reference by persons who have writing of any kind to do and who want occasional information on matters of good usage, grammar, spelling, punctuation, paragraphing, manuscript-arrangement, or letter-writing.

The aim of the book is not scientific, but practical. The purpose is to make clear the rules in regard to which many people make mistakes. No material has been put into the book for the sake of formal completeness. Many statements that would be essential to a treatise designed to exhaust the subjects here discussed (a treatise, for instance, on grammar, or composition-structure, or punctuation) have been omitted because they concern matters about which the persons who may use the book do not need to be told. In the knowledge and the observance of the rules fixed by good usage and suggested by common sense for the expression of thoughts in English and the representation of them on paper, there are many widely prevalent deficiencies, some natural enough, some very odd, but all shared by many people. The purpose of this manual is simply to help correct some of these deficiencies.

Some of the rules in this book, making no mention of exceptions, modifications, or allowable alternatives, may perhaps be charged with being dogmatic. They are dogmatic—purposely so. Suppose a youth, astray and confused in a maze of city streets, asks the way to a certain place. If one enumerates to him the several possible routes, with comments and admonitions and cautions about each, he will probably continue astray and confused. If one sends him peremptorily on one route, not mentioning permissible deviations or equally good alternative ways, the chance is much greater that he will reach his destination. Likewise, the erring composer of anarchic discourse can best be set right by concise and simple directions. This is one reason for the stringency of some of the rules. There is another reason; let me use another parable in explaining it. A student of piano-playing is held rigidly, during the early period of his study, to certain rules of finger movement. Those rules are sometimes varied or ignored by musicians. But the student, in order to progress in the art, must for a certain time treat the rules as stringent and invariable; the variations and exceptions are studied only at a later stage of his progress. So, in acquiring skill in the art of composition, it is necessary for most students to observe rigidly and invariably rules to which masters of the art make exceptions. I believe that Rules 63, 69, 78, 98, 99, 112, and 115, for example, should be so treated by most apprentices in composition.

A word about the literary obligations I have incurred. So far as concerns my indebtedness to that great common fund of grammatical and rhetorical doctrine on which he who will may draw, it may truly be said of me, as it has been said of Homer,

"What he thought he might require
He went and took."

To individual authors I may owe debts of which I am not aware; for when a man has accumulated a store of thoughts, some from individual writers, some from many writers in common, and some, perhaps, from his own psychic processes, he inevitably forgets the source of many elements of the mass. I know, however, that my thanks are due to Professors Adams Sherman Hill, William Dwight Whitney, Alphonso G. Newcomer, John Duncan Quackenbos, Fred Newton Scott, and Joseph Villiers Denney, for a number of ideas suggested by my acquaintance with their works.

I gratefully acknowledge here my obligation to Professor Frank Gaylord Hubbard, of the University of Wisconsin, and to Miss Rose M. Kavana, of the Medill High School in Chicago, who gave me much acute and valuable criticism during the preparation of the manuscript; and to several gentlemen (unknown to me) who, at the instance of the publishers, suggested some much-needed emendations before the book went to press, and also during its passage through the press. Though the book is probably not what Captain Costigan would call a "meritorious performance," it is in many respects nearer that character than it would be but for the generous aid of these known and unknown counselors.

HANDBOOK OF COMPOSITION

I. THE COMPOSITION OF DISCOURSE

The Standard of Good Usage

1. English discourse employing words generally approved by good usage, and employing them in the senses and in the grammatical functions and combinations generally approved by good usage, is called good English. English discourse employing words not generally approved by good usage, or employing words in senses and in grammatical functions and combinations not generally approved by good usage, is called bad English. By good usage is meant the usage generally observed in the writings of the best English authors and in the speech of well-educated people.

*Good
defined*

2. Regarding questions of good or bad English, there are several common errors:

*Mistaken
standards:*

(a) The supposition that an expression current in common conversation is thereby proved to be good English. If currency in common conversation were a valid test, such expressions as "ain't," "I says," "them fellows," "he laid down," "you hadn't ought," and "has went" would be good English.

*Colloquial
usage*

(b) The supposition that the usage of a number of well-educated persons with whom one is acquainted proves whether or not an expression is good English. It should be remembered that (as the foregoing definition of good usage implies) the true standard is the usage in which the majority of well-educated people, including the writers of undisputed literary merit, agree; not the usage of a relatively small number of well-educated persons. Some well-educated people say "he don't" and "proven"; but these expressions are none the less bad English, for the majority of well-educated people, including the writers of good literature, reject them.

*Limited

Newspaper usage

(c) The supposition that an expression current in the newspapers is thereby proved to be good English. Our newspapers are almost universally characterized by provincial and vulgar diction. (There are a few honorable exceptions.) An expression like "Rev. Clifford has proven himself a hustler" is no more justified by the wide currency of similar expressions in the newspapers than "has went" is justified by wide currency in conversation. General newspaper usage has nothing whatever to do with good English usage. (Cf. Rule 16 and the note to Rule 129.)

The usage of recent fiction

(d) The supposition that the employment of an expression by recent writers of popular fiction proves that the expression is good English. A writer does not, merely by being popular, take rank among the best English authors; such rank can be taken only upon the general judgment of scholars and critics, as well as of the reading public, and only after that judgment has endured a sufficient length of time to become established. The student will do well to rely for indications of what is good usage, not on recent writers, about whose literary rank he may make mistakes, but on authors of whose high rank he is sure, — such authors as Addison, Irving, Burke, Macaulay, De Quincey, Mill, Matthew Arnold, Ruskin, Emerson, Holmes, Dickens, Thackeray, George Eliot, Hawthorne, Poe, Stevenson. But, in consulting even such authors as these, he should beware of another common error regarding good usage; viz., —

(e) The supposition that a single instance of the use of a word by one of the best English authors proves the word to be good English. A word must be shown to be in general use among such authors, in order to be proved good English. The word "vim" can be found in the works of Stevenson, but it is nevertheless bad English.

Isolated instances not decisive

3. From the foregoing considerations it follows that in order to know by direct evidence what is good and what is bad English, one must have a wide acquaintance with English literature and a wide—in fact, an international—acquaintance with people of the best education. Lacking such acquaintance, one must look to trustworthy books on grammar, rhetoric, composition, and other subjects involving discussion of good usage, and to good dictionaries.

Means of learning good usage

NOTE. — Regarding the use of a dictionary for determining questions of good or bad English, a mistaken idea is often held,—viz., the supposition that the inclusion of a word in a dictionary proves the word to be good English. In consulting a dictionary for the standing of a word, one ought to observe, not merely whether the word is in the dictionary, but whether, being there, it is marked Obsolete, Slang, Low, Vulgar, Local, or Colloquial. If it is so marked, it is either bad English or English not in good literary standing.

Inclusion of a word in a dictionary is not decisive

Diction

Improprieties and Barbarisms

4. Avoid the vulgarism of using a word to fulfill the office of a part of speech to which it does not belong. (Such misuse of a word is called an impropriety.) Remember that —

Error regarding parts of speech

(a) Suicide, suspicion, wire, and clerk are nouns, not verbs. (b) Days, nights, mornings, evenings, afternoons, times, and places, are nouns, not adverbs. (c) Plenty is a noun, not an adjective or an adverb (see the Glossary).

(d) Them is a pronoun, not an adjective; to say "them boys" is like saying "him boy." (e) Combine, invite, steal, and try are verbs, not nouns. (f) Canine, equine, feline, human, military, vocal, and drunk are adjectives, not nouns. (g) Real, some, this, that (see these four words in the Glossary), any, good, and considerable are adjectives, not adverbs; and in modern prose friendly and cowardly are adjectives, not adverbs. (h) Down is an adverb, not a verb (see the Glossary). (i) Per cent. is an adverb phrase, not a noun (see the Glossary). (j) Near by is an adverb phrase, not an adjective (see the Glossary).

Unauthorized formations

5. The use of current words coined without authority from words in good standing is a violation of good usage.

Such unauthorized formations are called barbarisms. Among them are "enthuse" (see the Glossary), "bugglarize," "jell" (for the verb to jelly), "electrocute," "electrocution," "tasty" (for tasteful), "homey" (for homelike), "newsy," "musicianly," "complected" (see the Glossary), "preventative" (for preventive), "illy" (for ill), "overly" (see the Glossary), "cablegram" (say telegram, cable telegram, or cable message); and the contractions "photo," "auto," "phone," "gent," "pants," "most" (for almost), and "way" (for away).

Analogy not decisive

NOTE.—The standing of a word depends, not on the nature of its formation, but solely on its acceptance or non-acceptance by good usage (see Rules 1 and 2). "Baseballist" and "cheesery" are bad English, though they are formed after the analogy of pianist and creamery, which are good English.

Extemporized formations

6. Except as a humorous device, do not use words of your own coining, without ascertaining from a dictionary whether they are authorized. (See the note to Rule 3.)

Contractions

Inappropriate in formal composition

7. The contractions don't, isn't, haven't, etc., are not appropriate in formal composition. They are proper in conversation and in composition of a colloquial style.

Misuses of Pronouns

8. In formal composition, avoid using you indefinitely; Indefinite use, rather, the passive voice or the pronoun one. you

Crude : You should not use they indefinitely.

Right : They should not be used indefinitely ; [or] One should not use they indefinitely.

9. Avoid using they indefinitely ; use the passive voice, Indefinite or recast the sentence otherwise. they

Crude : They make bricks in Fostoria.

Right : Bricks are made in Fostoria.

Crude : They had a collision on the electric road.

Right : There was a collision ; [or] A collision occurred.

Crude : They don't have red-birds in Wisconsin, do they ?

Right : There are no red-birds in Wisconsin, are there ?

[or] Red-birds are not found in Wisconsin, are they ?

10. Except in impersonal expressions, such as it rains, Indefinite it seems, it is cold, do not use it without antecedent; recast the sentence. it

Crude : In the notice on the bulletin board it says the drill is held at four.

✓ Right : The notice on the bulletin board says the drill is held at four.

Crude : In Garland's Among the Corn Rows it gives a description of life among the farmers.

✓ Right : Garland's Among the Corn Rows gives a description, etc.; [or] In Garland's *Among the Corn
Rows* there is a description, etc.

Crude : Does it say " Fair Oaks " on that car ?

Right : Is that car marked " Fair Oaks " ?

11. The use of a demonstrative adjective (especially Indefinite that or those) that seems to anticipate a relative clause but is not completed by such a clause is a colloquialism not proper in formal composition. that and those

Wrong : I observed that the building was one of those rambling old mansions.

Right : I observed that the building was a rambling old mansion ; [or] ... one of those rambling old mansions that one often sees in New England towns.

Misuse of intensives

12. Do not use the intensive pronouns myself, himself, yourself, etc., unless emphasis is necessary ; use the simple personal pronouns I, he, you, etc.

Wrong : My wife and myself will go.

Right : My wife and I will go.

Wrong : This is for you and myself.

Right : This is for you and me.

"Yourself and guests"

13. Especially avoid expressions like "yourself and guests," "myself and brother." Say "you and your guests," "my brother and I."

Rhetorical Ornament

Triteness

worked formulas

14. Avoid such trite rhetorical expressions as the following:

favor with a selection render a vocal solo rendition discourse sweet music repast
do justice to a dinner sought his downy couch wended their way

along — lines ( e.g. , along agricultural lines)	waited in breathless suspense
along the line of	order out of chaos
along these lines	those with whom we come in contact

NOTE. — Literary ornament is good when it is attractive and appropriate. But the writer who uses such expressions as those in the foregoing list or those mentioned in Rule 15 uses ornament that is displeasing; and the writer who drags such expressions into a matter-of-fact context, where any ornament is incongruous, commits a double offense against good taste.

15. Avoid hackneyed quotations, literary allusions, and proverbs, such as the following :

Method in his madness
Monarch of all I survey
Sadder but wiser
Cupid has been busy
Variety is the spice of life
The best laid plans of mice and men, etc.
All work and no play, etc.
Never put off till to-morrow, etc.
Make hay while the sun shines
All is not gold, etc.
When ignorance is bliss, etc.
Music hath charms, etc.

Literary ornament

Hackneyed quotations, allusions, and proverbs

16. Obvious effort to decorate one's style with striking phraseology is a hackneyed newspaper mannerism (cf. Rule 2 c). This effort appears particularly in the following objectionable practices :

(a) The tediously habitual designation of States and cities by their nicknames (e.g., "the Buckeye State," "the Sunflower State," "the Gopher State," "the Cream City," etc.). This practice becomes especially objectionable when the nickname is obtruded, as it often is, at a place where no name at all is needed; e.g., paper

rhetoric

(b) The regular employment of miscellaneous current verbal ornaments, such as "fatal affray," "fistic encounter," "struggling mass of humanity," "scantily attired," "knights of the pen" (for reporters), "the officiating clergyman," "tied the knot," "pachyderm" (for elephant), "equines" (for horses), "canines" (for dogs), "felines" (for cats), etc.

Straining for novelty of phrase

(c) Obtrusive straining for novelty of phrase.

Vulgar: The football warriors of the Badger State will play the Windy City's squad of pigskin-chasers this afternoon.

Right: The Wisconsin football team will play the Chicago team this afternoon.

Vulgar: The guests spent the evening in doing the "light fantastic" act.

Right: The guests spent the evening in dancing.

Genuine and counterfeit
humor

NOTE.—The jocular purpose with which the above-mentioned mannerisms are often practiced furnishes no justification of them. Hackneyed and tawdry English, whatever its purpose, is still hackneyed and tawdry. In condemning the jocular use of these forms of expression, good taste does not condemn humorous writing; it condemns the crude and obvious counterfeiting of humor. A comic account of a football game or of an evening party is commendable if the humor is genuine and entertaining; but in saying "squad of pigskin-chasers" for football team, "did the light fantastic act" for danced, "the Hub" for Boston, or "Indefatigable knights of the pen dogged his steps as far as his hostelry" for Reporters followed him to his hotel,—in such language there is only a dull pretense of humor.

Affectation

17. Do not use high-flown language for plain things. High-flown language
- Bad : To keep the horse healthy you must be careful of his environment.
- Right : To keep the horse healthy you must be careful of his stable.

NOTE.—Showy language, like showy dress, is in bad taste. The essence of artistic language, as of everything artistic, is not abundant ornament but appropriateness. Straining for high-sounding expressions to replace plain English makes a style weak and crude. Call a leg a leg, not a limb; call a book a book, not an effort; call a letter a letter, not a kind favor; call socks socks, not hose; call a house a house, not a residence; say "I went to bed," not "I retired"; "I got up," not "I arose."

Plain English

18. In prose avoid the use of words suited only to poetry, such as dwelt, oft, oftentimes, ofttimes, morn, amid, 'mid, 'midst, o'er, 'neath, 'tis, 'twas. Poetic diction

19. The present tense, when it is used in relating past events, is called the historical present. The historical present, like other intense and unusual figures of speech, is proper only in an abundantly emotional style, in which highly figurative language seems spontaneous. In a plain, straightforward narrative, containing little that is imaginative, the introduction of the historical present is incongruous; it produces the effect either of a bald artifice or of a crude affectation. The historical present

Bad : He shouted to attract her attention, but she went on toward the danger not hearing his warning. Lashing his horse and riding swiftly toward her, he shouted again. This time she hears. She stands still and awaits him. He lifts her to his saddle and rides frantically toward the hut. [Throughout this passage the past tense should be used.]

and blanks in place of names

20. The custom of designating persons and places in a story by initials and dashes, and of representing dates in a similar manner, is obsolete; it suggests affectation. Naturalness and distinctness are gained by using complete names and dates.

Objectionable: I was sitting by the fire with my friend B— at his home in S—, one evening in 18—.

Preferable: I was sitting by the fire with my friend Bowman at his home in Surrey, one evening in 1893.

Names for characters
in a story

NOTE. — In narrative composition, definiteness, clearness, and smoothness are gained by calling the characters by name as soon as they are introduced.

Awkward: Two sisters were dining at our house. One of them chanced to remark that the other one could not endure strawberries. Now there was a dish of strawberries on the sideboard. The sister about whom the remark had been made could see this dish, but the other sister could not. The one who could see it made desperate efforts with her eyebrows and her feet to stop the other one, who, however, continued to expatiate on her sister's odd aversion. When the dessert was served, the chagrin of the sister who had made the unfortunate disclosure was amusing to see.

Improved: Two sisters, Fanny and Mary Davis, were dining at our house. Fanny chanced to remark that Mary could not endure strawberries. Now, there was on the sideboard a dish of strawberries, which Mary (the strawberry-hater) could see, but which Fanny could not see. Mary made desperate efforts to stop her sister, who, however, continued to expatiate on Mary's odd aversion. When the dessert was served, the chagrin of the indiscreet Fanny was amusing to see.

"The writer"
and "we"
for I

21. In mentioning yourself do not use the pretentious and inept expressions "we" and "the writer"; use plain, straightforward I, my, and me. The use of we in an editorial which purports to be the utterance of a board of editors is entirely proper. The use of we for designating an individual speaker or writer is an affectation. The editorial we

Bad: We have selected for our text the second verse of the Epistle of Jude.

Right: I have selected for my text, etc.

Bad: When quite a child we adopted the Graham system for dyspepsia. . . . We partook of [see the Glossary] but one meal in twenty-four hours. . . . Thus we passed most of our early years.

Right: When a mere child I adopted the Graham system of treatment for dyspepsia. . . . I took but one meal in twenty-four hours. . . . Thus I passed most of my early years.

Mixed Figures of Speech

22. Do not use a simile or metaphor which is incongruous with the expression preceding. Incongruity with what precedes Incongruous metaphor: The officers must enforce discipline among the raw material.

Right: The officers must enforce discipline among the new men.

Incongruous metaphor: We got some oil for the wheel at a farmhouse, and thus our hotbox was nipped in the bud.

Right: At a farmhouse we got some oil for the wheel and thus prevented a hotbox.

Incongruous metaphor: He must conduct his business on an honest foundation.

Right: He must conduct his business in an honest manner; [or] He must build his business on an honest foundation.

Bad: The probe of the Fond du Lac grand jury has netted five corrupt officials.

Right: The probe of the Fond du Lac grand jury has revealed five corrupt officials; [or] The drag net of the Fond du Lac grand jury has caught five corrupt officials.

Bad: With his fortune blown to the four winds, all his ambition was crushed.

Right: All his ambition was, like his fortune, blown to the four winds; [or] In the ruin of his fortune his ambition was crushed.

Figures
not carried out

23. When a simile or metaphor has been used, the expression following it should carry out the figure—should not (1) embody an incongruous figure or (2) be incongruously literal.

Bad: The freshman algebra course is a rocky and difficult road to travel. But whether we like it or not we are required to wade through it. [The figure embodied in "rocky road" is not carried out by the figure embodied in "wade through."]

Right: The freshman course in algebra is a rocky and difficult road to travel. But whether we like it or not, we are required to travel it.

Bad: It made a deep impression on my mind which I shall never forget. [The figure embodied in "impression" is not carried out by the literal expression "forget."]

Right: It made a deep impression on my mind, which will never be effaced.

Structure of Sentences

Some Fundamental Errors

Subordinate elements mistaken
for sentences

24. Subordinate sentence-elements should not be capitalized and punctuated like independent sentences. (See Exercise LXXIV.)

A. Wrong: It offers a course for those who wish to study painting. At the same time affording opportunity for literary study.

Right: It offers a course to those who wish to study painting, at the same time affording opportunity for literary study.

B. Wrong: Among her suitors were two she favored most. One a college student, the other a capitalist.

Right: Among her suitors were two she favored most; one a college student, the other a capitalist.

- C. Wrong: The care of oil lamps requires every day some untidy and disagreeable labor. While electric lights give the housekeeper no trouble.

Right: The care of oil lamps requires every day some untidy and disagreeable labor, while electric lights give the housekeeper no trouble.

25. Do not use a word, phrase, or clause without proper grammatical construction. Elements without syntax

Bad: The resonator responds in a manner analogous to that which one tuning fork responds to another.

Right: The resonator responds in a manner analogous to that in which one tuning fork responds to another.

Bad: That's all I want, is a chance to test it thoroughly. ["Is" has no subject.]

Right: That's all I want — a chance to test it thoroughly [see Rule 236 e]; [or] All I want is a chance to test it thoroughly.

Wrong: There were some people whom I could not tell whether they were English or American. ["Whom" has no construction.]

Right: There were some people about whom I could not tell whether they were English or American.

26. Do not begin a grammatical construction and leave it unfinished. Sentences or sentence-elements left uncompleted

Bad: The fact that I had never before studied at home, I was at a loss what to do with vacant periods. [The noun "fact" with its appositive modifier "that . . . home" is left without any construction.]

Right: The fact that I had never before studied at home made me feel at a loss as to what to do with vacant periods.

Bad: The story tells how a young German, who, having settled in Dakota, returns to Wisconsin and there marries an old schoolmate. [The clause beginning "how a young German" is left unfinished; "German" (modified by the clause "who . . . schoolmate") has no construction.]

Right: The story tells how a young German, having settled in Dakota, returns to Wisconsin and marries an old schoolmate.

Wrong: Any man who could accomplish that task, the whole world would think he was a hero. ["Man," with its modifier "who . . . task," is left without any construction.]

Right: Any man who could accomplish that task the whole world would regard as a hero.

Sentence
as subject or predicate complement

27. The use of a sentence (except a quoted sentence) as the subject of is or was is a crudity.

Crude: I was detained by business is the reason I am late.

Right: I was detained by business; that is the reason I am late.

A similar fault is the use of a sentence (except a quoted sentence) as a predicate substantive after is or was. This fault may be corrected by changing the sentence to a substantive clause.

Crude: The difference between them is De Quincey is humorous and Macaulay is grave.

Right: The difference between them is that De Quincey is humorous and Macaulay is grave.

When or where clause for predicate
noun

28. Do not use a when or where clause in place of a predicate noun; use a noun with modifiers.

Bad: Intoxication is when the brain is affected by the action of certain drugs.

Right: Intoxication is a state of the brain, caused by the action of certain drugs.

Agreement of subject and verb

Grammatical Agreement<sup>1</sup>

29. A verb should agree in number with its subject.

(a) Be careful not to make a verb agree with a word intervening between it and the subject, instead of with the subject. (See Exercise XIX.)

Intervening words

Wrong : A new order of ideas and principles have been instituted.

Right : A new order of ideas and principles has been instituted.

(b) Words joined to a subject by with, together with, including, as well as, or no less than, do not affect the number of the subject. Number of the subject not affected by with, etc.

Wrong : The captain, as well as the mate and the pilot, were frightened.

Right : The captain, as well as the mate and the pilot, was frightened.

(c) Two or more singular subjects joined by or or nor require a singular verb. Subjects joined by or or nor Wrong : Neither he nor she are here.

Right : Neither he nor she is here.

Wrong : One or the other of those fellows have stolen it.

Right : One or the other of those fellows has stolen it.

30. A verb agrees with its subject, not with its predicate noun. Incorrect agreement with a predicate noun Wrong : The main part of this machine are the large rollers.

Right : The main part of this machine is the large rollers.

Wrong : Oak, brass, and steel is the material of the structure.

Right : Oak, brass, and steel are the material of the structure.

31. Each, every, either, neither, some one, somebody, any one, anybody, every one, everybody, no one, nobody, one, and a person accord with singular, not plural, verbs and pronouns. (See Exercise XX.) Each, every, etc.

Wrong : Every one opened their window.

✓ Right : Every one opened his window.

Wrong : Each of the suspected men were held.

✓ Right : Each of the suspected men was held.

Method of
correction

32. In correcting violations of Rule 31, recasting is often advisable.

Wrong : Everybody there objected and declared they thought it barbarous.

Right : All the people there objected and declared they thought it barbarous.

Matters of Case

Nominative case for subject

Who not affected by
he says,
etc.

33. The subject of a verb (except of an infinitive ; see Rule 35) should be in the nominative case.

(a) This rule holds of the pronoun who when an expression like he says intervenes between the pronoun and its verb. (See Exercise XXI.)

Wrong : The man whom I thought was my friend deceived me.

Right : The man who I thought was my friend deceived me. ["Who" is the subject of "was"; "I thought" is a mere parenthesis.]

Wrong : Whom did they say won ?

Right : Who did they say won ?

Who or whoever not affected by preceding words

(b) The pronoun who or whoever, when it is the subject of a finite verb, should not be attracted into the objective case by a verb or a preposition preceding the clause introduced by the who or whoever. (See Exercise XXII.)

Wrong : Send whomever will do the work.

Right : Send whoever will do the work. ["Whoever" is the subject of "will do," not the object of "send." The object of "send" is the implied antecedent of "whoever."]

Wrong : The question of whom should be leader arose.

Right : The question of who should be leader arose. ["Who" is the subject of "should be," not the object of "of." The object of "of" is the substantive clause "who should be leader."]

34. A predicate substantive completing a finite verb should be in the nominative case. (See Exercise XXIV.)

Predicate substantive with finite verb

Right: It is I. — The beneficiaries are she, they, and we. — Is it we that you accuse?

35. The subject of an infinitive and the predicate substantive completing an infinitive should be in the objective case. (See Exercises XXI, XXII, and XXIV.)

Subject and predicate complement of an infinitive

Right: The gazette reported him to be dead. ["Him" is the subject of the infinitive "to be."]

Right: She imagined the burglar to be me. ["Me" is the predicate substantive completing "to be."]

Right: The man whom I thought to be my friend deceived me. ["Whom" is the subject of "to be."]

Cf. the first two examples under Rule 33 a.]

36. The object of a verb or of a preposition should be in the objective case. (See Exercise XXIV.)

Object of verb or preposition

Right: Whom do you mean? — It is for her, him, and me. — He helped my mother and me. — All are going, including him, her, and us two. — Does that rule apply to us older members?

37. An appositive should be in the same case as the noun with which it is in apposition.

Appositives

Right: All are going, — he, she, and we two. — He spoke to some of us, — namely, her and me. — We all met, — she, the officer, they you mentioned, and I.

38. Than and as are not prepositions; they are conjunctions, always used to introduce subordinate clauses. When a single substantive follows than or as, that substantive is not the object of a preposition; it is a member of a clause of which the remainder is omitted because easily supplied from the preceding clause. The case of such a substantive depends on its construction in the clause when the clause is completed. (See Exercise XXIII.)

Substantive after than or as

Right: He is happier than I. ["Than I" = "than I am."]

Right: I can do it as well as they. ["As they" = "as they can do it."]

Right: I should help him more willingly than her.
["Than her" = "than I should help her."]

whom*

NOTE.—The expression than whom is ungrammatical, but well established as an idiom.

"... when Beelzebub perceived, — than whom,
Satan except, none higher sat, — with grave Aspect he rose. . . ."

— Paradise Lost, Book II.

Possessive
case:
Nouns
not designating
persons

39. As a rule, do not use the possessive case of nouns not designating persons.

Bad: Our university's rules.

Right: The rules of our university.

Bad: Australia's resources.

Right: The resources of Australia.

Permissible exceptions

NOTE.—To this rule good usage justifies certain exceptions. For example, the use of the possessive of day, hour, week, month, year, century, and other nouns designating periods of time is freely allowed; as day's journey, a year's vacation. But an inexperienced writer should observe the rule carefully, not making exceptions other than those that he knows are frequently made by recognized masters of English prose.

Possessive case in objective sense

40. Do not use the possessive case of a noun to indicate the object of an action; use an of phrase.

Wrong: Lincoln's assassination.

Right: The assassination of Lincoln.

Wrong: Mankind's benefactor.

Right: The benefactor of mankind.

Possessive
with gerunds

41. Put the substantive modifying a gerund in the possessive case.

Wrong: We left without any one knowing.

Adjectives and Adverbs

42. In such expressions as He looks sad, He looks sadly, It sounds clear, It sounds clearly, He stands firm, He stands firmly, the word following the verb should be an adjective if it designates a characteristic or condition of the subject; if it modifies the verb, it should be an adverb.

Adverb or
adjective

Right: He appears good [i.e., appears to be a good man].

Right: He appears well in public [i.e., makes his appearance in a creditable manner].

Right: The music sounds loud [i.e., has the characteristic of loud music].

Right: The bugle sounded loudly through the ranks [i.e., sounded in a loud manner].

Right: It stands immovable. It smells sweet. It tastes sour. Your hand feels cold. It burns bright. She looks dainty. That statement sounds queer.

NOTE. — In such expressions as I am well and I am ill, well and ill are adjectives (see these words in a dictionary). An expression like “I am nicely,” “I am poorly,” is an ungrammatical vulgarism.

“Nicely” and “poorly”

43. In such expressions as He holds it steady, He holds it steadily, He filled it full, He filled it fully, the modifier should be an adjective if it designates the condition of the object — the condition produced by the action of the verb; if it designates the manner of action of the verb, it should be an adverb.

Adverb or factive
adjective

Right: He kept it safe [i.e., through his keeping, it was safe].

Right: He kept it safely [i.e., he performed in a safe manner the act of keeping].

Right: He wrapped it tight [“tight” designates the condition of the object].

Right: He wrapped it tightly [“tightly” designates the mode of wrapping].

Right : Sweep it clean. Hold it motionless. Shoot him dead. Nail it solid. Bury it deep. Raise it high.

Matters of Voice

passive voice

44. Do not use the passive voice when such use makes a statement clumsy and wordy.

Resulting in awkwardness

Bad : Your letter was received and carefully read by me.

Right : I received and carefully read your letter.

(See Rule 336.)

Resulting in vagueness

45. Do not, by using the passive voice, leave the agent of the verb vaguely indicated, when the agent should be clearly indicated.

Bad : That was a crisis in my life, which will never be forgotten.

Right : That was a crisis in my life, which I shall never forget.

Matters of Tense

Shall and will :

Expecta-
tion

46. To represent simple expectation on the part of the speaker, use shall (or its inflectional form should) and will (or its inflectional form would) according to the following formula :

I shall (should)	we shall (should) thou wilt (wouldst)	you will (would)
he will (would)	they will (would)

Wrong : I don't believe I will be able to go.

Right : I don't believe I shall be able to go.

Right : I don't believe he will be able to go.

Wrong : I feared I would fail.

Right : I feared I should fail.

Right : I feared you would fail.

(See Exercise XXVII.)

Determination

47. To represent determination, desire, or promise on the part of the speaker, use shall (or should) and will (or would) according to the following formula :

I will (would)	we will (would) thou shalt (shouldst)	you shall (should) he shall (should)	they shall (should)

Right : I will help you ; I promise it. You shall not stir ; I forbid it. They shall be hanged at sunrise ; we, the court, decree it.

(See Exercise XXVII.)

48. In a question containing shall or should, will or would, — In questions

(a) When the subject is in the first person, the auxiliary should always be shall or should, except in repeating a question addressed to the speaker (e.g., "Will I help you ? Why, certainly").

(b) When the subject is in the second or third person, use the auxiliary that will be used in the answer.

Right form for a question as to expectation : Shall you be recognized, do you think ? [The answer, according to Rule 46, would be either "I shall be" or "I shall not be" ; therefore shall should be used in the question.]

Right form for a question as to intention : Will you do the deed ? [The answer, according to Rule 47, would be either "I will" or "I will not ;" therefore will should be used in the question.]

(See Exercise XXVII.)

49. In an indirect quotation use the auxiliary that would properly be used if the quotation were direct. In indirect quotations

Right : He said he thought he should ride. [The direct quotation would be, "I think I shall ride" ; therefore should (an inflectional form of shall) should be used in the indirect quotation.]

50. In subordinate clauses making contingent statements, shall and should are correctly used for all persons. † Shall and should in contingent statements

Right : If they should find it, I should rejoice.

Right : A man who should do that would be hated.

The undated past tense

51. Obscurity, or an effect of incompleteness, arises from the use of a verb in the past tense unaccompanied by a time modifier, when there is in the context no indication of the time of the action.

Obscure and incomplete : In accounting for the origin of Lake Wingra, geologists say that a small stream ran through the territory where the lake now lies.

Clear [The necessary time modifier of "ran" is supplied] : In accounting for the origin of Lake Wingra, geologists say that at some remote period a small stream ran through the territory where the lake now lies.

Obscure and incomplete : The filament of an incandescent lamp is usually made of carbon. Filaments were also made of platinum ; but this metal, because of its very high price, is at present not used at all in electric lamps.

Clear [The necessary time modifier of "were" is supplied] : The filament of an incandescent lamp is usually made of carbon. Formerly, filaments were made of platinum also ; but this metal, etc.

Past misused for past-perfect

52. When the course of a narrative is suspended for the introduction of a preceding event, the past-perfect tense should be used.

Obscure : Mitchell hired a jockey named Brunt to ride Shackles in the approaching race. Brunt was injured in a jump-race and gave up racing for a time. But Mitchell persuaded him to begin again. [The reader supposes that the events stated in the italicized sentence followed the employment of Brunt by Mitchell ; whereas the writer intends to say that those events preceded the employment. The use of the past tense in the italicized sentence is thus entirely misleading.]

Clear : Mitchell hired a jockey named Brunt to ride Shackles in the approaching race. Brunt had been injured in a jump-race and had given up racing for a time. But Mitchell persuaded him to begin again.

53. Guard against the incorrect attraction of infinitives and conditional verb-phrases into the perfect tense. An infinitive should be in the present tense unless it represents action prior to that of the governing verb.

Misuse of perfect infinitives and perfect conditional forms

Wrong: It was not necessary for you to have gone.

Right: It was not necessary for you to go.

Wrong: I intended to have answered.

Right: I intended to answer.

A conditional verb-phrase in a dependent clause should be in the present tense unless it represents action prior to that of the governing verb.

Wrong: I should not have said it if I had thought it would have shocked her.

Right: I should not have said it if I had thought it would shock her.

54. Do not use a present participle to represent an action not synchronous with that of the governing verb.

Anachronous participles

Wrong: On Thursday he left for Pittsburg, arriving there on Sunday.

Right: He left for Pittsburg on Thursday and arrived there on Sunday.

Wrong: Starting for London, he arrived there two weeks later.

Right: He started for London and arrived there two weeks later.

Wrong: It is old, being founded in 1809.

Right: It is old, having been founded in 1809.

Reference

55. Do not use a pronoun, or a pronominal expression, the reference of which is uncertain or not immediately evident. The possibility of even momentary doubt, or of momentary ludicrous reference to a wrong word, as well as real obscurity of reference, should be avoided. (See Exercise XXVIII.)

Uncertain or ludicrous reference

Uncertain : Geraint followed the knight to a town, where he entered a castle.

Uncertain : He told his father he would soon get a letter.

Not immediately evident : The ghost of his old partner appeared to Scrooge. He told him he must reform.

Ludicrous : Whistling for Rover, my cousin put a pail in his mouth and we started.

Method of
correction

56. Violations of Rule 55 may sometimes be corrected by repeating the antecedent or using an equivalent noun ; thus :

Right : Whistling for Rover, my cousin put a pail in the dog's mouth, and we started.

But usually recasting is advisable ; thus :

Right : Geraint followed the knight to a town and there saw him enter a castle.

Right : He said to his father, " You will [or I shall] soon get a letter."

Right : The ghost of his partner appeared to Scrooge and admonished him to reform.

Weak reference of this and that

57. The pronouns this and that are peculiarly liable to be used with what may be called weak reference. In case of such use, the fault may often be corrected by changing the pronoun to a demonstrative adjective and inserting a noun after it. Thus :

Weak reference : He asked where Cary was. I could not answer that.

Right : He asked where Cary was. I could not answer that question.

Weak reference : We do oppose the bill ; if we did not, we should not publish this.

Right : We do oppose the bill ; if we did not, we should not publish this article.

Remote
reference

58. Do not use a pronoun to refer to a noun that has not been used for a considerable space ; repeat the noun.

59. Do not use a pronoun referring to a noun subordinate in thought or syntax; repeat the noun or recast the sentence.

Reference to a noun not prominent Bad : Mrs. Bloodgood will appear at Powers's theater in Fitch's play, The Girl with the Green Eyes. This piece was written by him especially for Mrs. Bloodgood.

Right : Mrs. Bloodgood will appear at Powers's theater in Fitch's play, The Girl with the Green Eyes. This piece was written by Mr. Fitch especially for Mrs. Bloodgood.

Bad : In Miss Howerth's story of her life she relates this incident.

Right : Miss Howerth in the story of her life relates this incident.

60. Do not use a pronoun, or a pronominal expression, seeming to refer to a word or phrase that has not been expressed. (See Exercise XXVIII.)

Reference to a word not expressed

Bad : The cadet must keep his hands out of his pockets ; that would be very unsoldierly.

Right : The cadet must keep his hands out of his pockets ; to put them there would be very unsoldierly.

Bad : Marx is a violinist, the study of which instrument he began when a boy.

Right : Marx is a violinist. He began the study of the violin when he was a boy.

Bad : A stove is a structure of iron used for holding fire. They are employed for both heating and cooking.

Right : A stove is a structure of iron used for holding fire. Stoves are employed for both heating and cooking.

Bad : Mink-skins are valuable, because these animals are now scarce.

Right : Mink-skins are valuable, because minks are now scarce.

61. Do not use a pronoun followed by its antecedent in parentheses; use the antecedent alone or else recast the sentence.

Antecedent in parentheses

Awkward : If Davis treated Dixon discourteously, there is no objection to his (Dixon's) decision.

Right : If Davis treated Dixon discourteously, there is no objection to Dixon's decision ; [or] Dixon is not to be blamed for his decision if he was treated discourteously by Davis.

Dangling modifiers

Dangling
participles

62. A participle should not be used unless the substantive it logically modifies appears in the same sentence and is naturally and immediately connected with the participle. (See Exercise XXIX.)

Wrong : Every morning I take a run followed by a shower bath.

Right : Every morning I take a run and immediately afterward a shower bath.

Wrong : He was deaf, caused by an early attack of scarlet fever.

Right : He was deaf, as the result of an early attack of scarlet fever.

Participle
introducing a sentence or clause

63. A participle should not introduce a sentence or clause, unless it logically modifies the subject of the sentence or clause. (See Exercise XXIX.)

Wrong : Having come of age, I took my son into partnership with me.

Wrong : There we landed, and having eaten our lunch the steamboat departed.

Method of
correction

64. Violations of the foregoing rule may be corrected either (a) by changing the participial phrase to a clause, or (b) by making the noun logically modified by the participle the subject of the sentence or clause. Thus :

Right : (a) When my son came of age, I took him into partnership ; [or] (b) Having come of age, my son entered into partnership with me.

Right : (a) There we landed, and after we had eaten our lunch the steamboat departed ; [or] (b) There we landed, and having eaten our lunch we saw the steamboat depart.

65. A participle preceded by thus should not be used except to modify the subject of the preceding verb. Participle preceded by thus

Wrong: He was careful to avoid having a notice sent to his parents that he had failed, thus causing sorrow at both ends of the line. ["Causing," intended to modify "notice," appears instead to modify "he" and to express the result of "was careful to avoid," etc.]

Right: He was careful that his parents should not receive a notice that he had failed, which would have caused sorrow both to them and to himself.

Wrong: He has to stand still until the rod man comes up, thus giving him no chance to move about and keep warm.

Right: He has to stand still until the rod man comes up, and thus he has no chance to move about and keep warm.

66. A gerund phrase (e.g., in speaking, after going) should not be used unless the substantive to which it logically relates is present in the same sentence and is naturally and immediately connected with the gerund phrase. (See the examples under Rule 67.) (See Exercise XXX.) Dangling gerund phrases

NOTE. — This rule and Rule 67 do not apply when the gerund designates general action, not the action of any special agent. Thus:

Right: In swimming, the head should not be lifted too high.

67. A gerund phrase should not introduce a sentence or clause unless it logically modifies the subject of the sentence or clause. (See Exercise XXX.) Gerund phrase introducing sentence or clause Wrong: In talking to Smith the other day, he told me about the race.

Wrong: After pointing out my errors I was dismissed.

Wrong: After flunking three times, the professor reproved me.

Wrong: After singing hymn 523, Mr. Barnes will lead in prayer.

Method of
correction

68. Violations of the foregoing rule may be corrected either (a) by changing the gerund phrase to a clause, or (b) by making the noun to which the gerund phrase logically relates the subject of the sentence or clause. Thus:

Right: (a) As I was talking to Smith the other day, he told me about the race; [or] (b) In talking to Smith the other day I learned about the race.

Right: (a) When he had pointed out my errors, I was dismissed; [or] (b) After pointing out my errors he dismissed me.

Right: (a) When I had flunked three times, the professor reproved me; [or] (b) After flunking three times, I was reproved by the professor.

Right: (a) After we have sung hymn 523, Mr. Barnes will lead in prayer; [or] (b) After singing hymn 523, we shall be led in prayer by Mr. Barnes.

elliptical
clauses

69. An elliptical clause (a clause from which the subject and predicate are omitted; e.g., while going for while I was going, when a boy for when he was a boy) should not be used unless the omitted subject is the subject of the governing clause. (See Exercise XXXI.)

Wrong: When six years old, my grandfather died.

Wrong: You must not cut the cake until thoroughly cooked.

Method of
correction

70. A violation of the foregoing rule may be corrected by supplying the subject and predicate of the elliptical clause. Thus:

Right: When I was six years old, my grandfather died.

Right: You should not cut the cake until it is thoroughly cooked.

Elliptical
clauses in titles

71. Rule 69 forbids such titles as An Accident While Hunting, Things Learned While Canvassing. Write rather An Accident in a Bear Hunt, Things Learned by a Canvasser.

Unity

72. A sentence should be so composed that the reader feels it to be a unit. General principle

73. Two or more statements conspicuously lacking connection with each other should not be embodied in one sentence. State-ments un-connected in thought

Bad : Ferguson's features resemble George Washington's, and he was taken into custody.

Right : Ferguson was taken into custody. His features, by the way, resemble Washington's.

Bad : Mr. Booth's parents were early settlers in this county. . . . After leaving West Point, Mr. Booth, who was formerly well known by our readers, went to the Philippines.

Right : Mr. Booth was formerly well known by our readers. His parents were early settlers in this county. . . . After leaving West Point, Mr. Booth went to the Philippines.

NOTE. — Sometimes a sentence consisting of two statements lacking connection with each other may be corrected by adding words and rearranging so that a connection between the statements is established. Unity secured by recasting

Bad : The operation of an incubator is simple, but no machine will work well unless it is watched.

Right [unity secured] : An incubator is simple in operation, but, like any other machine, it will not work well unless it is watched.

74. Long compound sentences consisting of many statements strung together with and's and but's are peculiarly crude. Stringy compound sentences

Bad : The court often gathered to watch Van Dyck at work, but before the picture was finished the Revolution broke out and every one was too much excited to watch its progress, but it went on just the same and was soon finished, and it remains to this day a brilliant proof of the painter's skill.

Right: The court often gathered to watch Van Dyck at work. Soon the revolution broke out. The picture was forgotten by the courtiers in their excitement, but the painter continued to work at it and soon finished it. It remains to this day a brilliant proof of Van Dyck's skill.

Straggling sentences

75. Long, straggling sentences, written without grammatical plan and incapable of making a single definite impression on a reader's mind, are a palpable violation of unity.

Bad: I arrived in Grand Rapids at ten p.m. after ten hours of travel and was met at the train by my brother who greeted me in a very pleasing manner after which we made our way to his home and were met at the door by his wife who had supper ready so we did it justice first then talked about home affairs and the great times we used to have and planned for a great fishing excursion for the next day.

Right: I arrived in Grand Rapids at ten p.m., after ten hours of travel. My brother met me at the train with due cordiality and took me to his home. At the door his wife met us with the good news that supper was ready. After supper we had a long talk about home affairs and the good times we had had. Then we formed a plan for a fishing trip on the next day.

cured by good organiza-
tion

NOTE.—A sentence may, however, be long without violating the principle of unity. Compare the two following sentences:

1. Tennyson's poem Lady Clara Vere de Vere is the speech of a young country fellow to a young lady of high birth who is beautiful but a heartless coquette, having attempted to ensnare the young man and then cast him off merely to amuse herself, as she has done with a number of other young fellows, one of whom, as the young man who is speaking reminds her, committed suicide from grief at her cruelty, which makes the young man who is speaking despise the lady, for he tells her that he cares neither for her beauty nor for her high birth, since she has no goodness of heart, and he solemnly tells her she ought to cease amusing herself by her coquetry and to "pray Heaven for a human heart."

2. Tennyson's poem Lady Clara Vere de Vere is the speech of a manly young country fellow to a beautiful but heartless young lady of high birth, who has attempted to amuse herself by breaking his heart,—a speech expressing disdain for charms beneath which there is no goodness of heart, and contempt for hereditary rank of which the possessor lacks true virtue and honor; reminding the lady of the suicide of another country lad, whom she had enticed by feigned affection and then cruelly repudiated; and solemnly adjuring her to cease her unworthy and injurious diversion, to turn her leisure to some good end, and to "pray Heaven for a human heart."

The first sentence is long and straggling; it is a glaring violation of unity. The second is nearly as long as the first but it is not straggling; it is composed upon a definite and clearly apparent grammatical plan; it does not violate the principle of unity. In the grammatical organization that gives the second sentence unity in spite of its unusual length, parallelism is an important factor (see Rule 111). Observe that the sentence consists of a single main subject and predicate, and depending on that subject and predicate a number of parallel members,—that is, members grammatically alike and introduced alike; and that two of these members have parallelism within themselves,—that is, consist of a single word or phrase as a basis and of a series of parallel members in a common relation to that basis. This parallelism in the second sentence may be made clear by the following diagram:

Tennyson's poem . . . is . . . a speech	{	1. expressing	{	a. disdain
		2. reminding		b. contempt
		3. adjuring her	{	a. to cease
				b. to turn
				c. to pray

(See Exercise XL.)

76. Avoid abrupt change in the point of view within a sentence.

Change of
view

Bad: We passed over the road quickly and soon the camp was reached. [At the beginning of the sentence, the point of view is that of the travelers; after "and" the point of view is that of the camp.]

Right: We passed over the road quickly and soon reached the camp. [The point of view of the travelers is kept throughout.]

Bad: In order to clean the chain, it should be removed and soaked in kerosene. [At the beginning, the point of view is that of the person who does the cleaning; after the comma the point of view is that of the object to be cleaned.]

Right: In order to clean the chain, remove it and soak it in kerosene [the point of view of the person who cleans the chain is kept throughout]; [or] In order that the chain may be thoroughly cleansed, it should be removed and soaked in kerosene [the point of view of the chain is kept throughout].

Order of Members

Position of modifiers:

General
rule

77. Every modifier should be so placed that the reader connects it immediately with the member it modifies, and not with some other member. The possibility of even momentary doubt or of ludicrous misinterpretation, as well as real obscurity regarding the application of a modifier, should be avoided. (See Exercise XXXII.)

Bad: The storm broke just as we reached the shore with great violence.

Right: Just as we reached the shore, the storm broke with great violence.

Bad: The ball is thrown home by a player stationed in the middle of the square called the pitcher.

Right: The ball is thrown home by a player called the pitcher, who is stationed in the middle of the square.

Position of the adverbs
only, almost, etc.

78. Be especially careful to place the adverbs only, merely, just, almost, ever, hardly, scarcely, quite, nearly, next to the words they modify, not elsewhere. (See Exercise XXXIII.)

- A. Wrong: It is the handsomest vase I almost ever saw.
Right: It is almost the handsomest vase I ever saw.
- B. Wrong: Do you ever expect to go again?
Right: Do you expect ever to go again?
- C. Wrong: I never remember having met him. [Here "ever" is misplaced and made to modify the wrong word, for never = not ever.]
Right: I do not remember ever having met him.
- D. Wrong: I only want three.
Right: I want only three.
- E. Wrong: It is the prettiest I nearly ever saw.
Right: It is nearly the prettiest I ever saw.

79. A modifying clause should not be so placed that a verb following it may, in reading, be erroneously joined with the verb of the clause, instead of with the verb preceding the clause. Misplaced clauses

Ill arranged: I walked out into the night as the moon rose and wandered through the grounds.

Clear: As the moon rose, I walked out into the night and wandered through the grounds.

Ill arranged: He sprang to the platform on which the dead man lay and shouted.

Clear: Springing to the platform on which the dead man lay, he shouted.

Bad: A terrible wind and thunder storm visited the Fourth Regiment camp Thursday night, shortly after taps were sounded, playing havoc on all sides.

Right: On Thursday night, shortly after taps was sounded, a violent wind and thunder storm visited the Fourth Regiment camp, playing havoc on all sides.

80. As a rule, arrange a sentence containing a relative clause so that the clause immediately follows its antecedent. Position of relative clauses Awkward: I had many pleasant experiences while I was there, some of which I shall always remember.

Better: While I was there, I had many pleasant experiences, some of which I shall always remember.

Awkward: The correspondence began just one month later which led to the surrender.

Better: Just one month later began the correspondence which led to the surrender.

NOTE. — It may happen that a sentence containing a relative clause cannot be arranged according to the foregoing rule. In such a case it is often necessary, for clearness, to use two separate sentences or two coördinate clauses.

Bad: The police are looking to-day for the persons last in company with Clara Belinfant, the daughter of Abraham Belinfant, a rich New York merchant, who has been missing since July 18.

Right: The police are looking to-day for the persons last seen in company with Clara Belinfant, the daughter of Abraham Belinfant, a rich New York merchant. The girl has been missing since July 18.

Squinting
modifiers

81. Do not place between two members of a sentence a modifier applicable to either member. Do not trust to punctuation to show the application of the modifier; recast the sentence.

Defective: He declared that if they did not release Blount, the English envoy, within two hours, in spite of all protest he would shell the town.

Right: He declared that if within two hours they did not release Blount, the English envoy, he would, in spite of all protest, shell the town; [or, if "within two hours" is intended to modify "shell the town"] He declared that if they did not release Blount, the English envoy, he would shell the town within two hours, in spite of all protest.

Defective: The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of the girl to-day brought in a verdict of suicide.

Right: The coroner's jury which has been investigating the death of the girl brought in to-day a verdict of suicide.

Paren-
thetic
modifiers

82. A modifier of one of the clauses of a sentence may often with advantage be inserted within the clause it modifies rather than placed before or after. Thus:

Clear and forcible : If, after all that has been said, you still hesitate, I despair of persuading you.

83. It is often advantageous to place however, therefore, nevertheless, moreover, and the like, within the sentences they introduce rather than at the beginning.

Parenthetical position of therefore, however, etc.

Inferior : His master was always very kind to him. However, his master's wife was altogether too parsimonious.

Better : His master was always very kind to him. His master's wife, however, was altogether too parsimonious.

84. Two phrases or clauses modifying the same sentence element should not be placed one before and the other after that element ; they should be put together.

Separation of coordinate modifiers

Awkward : When he has once made up his mind, you may be sure he will never draw back when he has got fully started.

Right : When he has once made up his mind and got fully started, you may be sure he will never draw back.

85. Do not put an adverb or a phrase between an infinitive and its sign to. (See Exercise XXXIV.)

Split infinitives

Inelegant : I went there in order to personally inspect it.

Right : I went there in order to inspect it personally.

Inelegant : It is impossible to in any way remove them.

Right : It is impossible in any way to remove them.

86. Arrange the members of a sentence so that the sentence reads smoothly, when this arrangement does not impair clearness.

Smooth order

Awkward : He, instead of acting as my guide, followed me.

Right : Instead of acting as my guide he followed me.

Awkward : Fishing was not good, and they, becoming impatient, decided to quit.

Right: Fishing was not good, and becoming impatient they decided to quit.

Pause after preposi-
tion

NOTE.—This principle is violated by interposing a number of words between a preposition and its object, so that an awkward pause occurs after the preposition.

Awkward: He submitted to, though he did not fully approve of, the rules.

Better: He submitted to the rules, though he did not fully approve of them.

See also the first Right example under Rule 90 a.

Such a construction may be used, for the sake of brevity, in statutes, contracts, and the like, in which smoothness of style is of little consequence.

“The Congress shall have power to dispose of, and make all needful rules and regulations respecting, the territory . . . belonging to the United States.”—THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

Except in such a context, the harshness of the construction more than offsets the gain in compactness.

Ordering a sentence with reference to the preceding
sentence

87. Arrange the members of a sentence so as to form close connection with the preceding sentence.

Inferior: He wished to examine the planet Mars, then in the western part of the sky. He began to turn the telescope in order to do this.

Better: He wished to examine the planet Mars, then in the western part of the sky. In order to do this, he began to turn the telescope.

Strong close

88. For force, close sentences strongly; put unimportant phrases elsewhere than at the end.

Inferior: Then he would return to work, whistling a merry tune all the while.

Better: Then he would return to work, all the while whistling a merry tune.

Inferior: He said nothing, but kept looking at my neck for some reason or other.

Better: He said nothing, but for some reason or other kept looking at my neck.

NOTE.—The foregoing rule does not concern a matter of correct or incorrect practice, but merely a matter of greater or less rhetorical effectiveness. The common belief that a sentence ending with a preposition is on that account incorrect is a mistake; such sentences abound in good literature; e.g.,
A sentence ending with a preposition

“I will not say that the meaning of Shakespeare’s names . . . may be entirely lost sight of.”—ARNOLD.

“M. Planche’s advantage is . . . that there is a force of cultivated opinion for him to appeal to.”—ARNOLD.

Moreover, such sentences, as Professor Hill remarks, “do not contravene the principle which forbids a writer to throw stress on unimportant words; for . . . the stress is thrown, not on the last word, but on the next to the last.”

89. A series of assertions or modifiers noticeably varying in strength should be placed in climactic order, unless the writer intends to make an anticlimax for the sake of humor.

Climactic order

Weak: I think that the characters are well drawn, the diction is stately and beautiful, and the plot is very interesting.

Improved: I think that the plot is very interesting, the characters are well drawn, and the diction is stately and beautiful.

Weak: He proved himself to be mercilessly cruel at times, unforgiving, and discourteous.

Improved: He proved himself to be unforgiving, discourteous, and at times mercilessly cruel.

Incorrect Omissions

90. A word or a combination of words may often be correctly used in a double capacity if it is perfectly fitted for both the offices it serves. For example, in the sentence, “I can do it as well as you,” “can do it” serves as the predicate of both “I” and “you,” and does so correctly, since it agrees grammatically with both pronouns. But there are various ways of using words in a double Words used in a double capacity capacity that are incorrect; these are indicated in the following rules:

Auxiliaries and copulas in a double capacity

(a) Do not supply an auxiliary verb or a copula from one part of a sentence to another if the same form is not grammatically proper in both parts; write the proper form with each part.

Wrong: The fire was built and the potatoes baked.

Right: The fire was built and the potatoes were baked.

Wrong: He was a patriot, but all the rest traitors.

Right: He was a patriot, but all the rest were traitors.

NOTE. — The supplying of an auxiliary from one clause to another is likely to produce an awkward sentence in most cases, even when there is no violation of the foregoing principle. As a rule, repeat an auxiliary rather than supply it.

Awkward: She was taken by surprise and a pistol thrust into her face.

Better: She was taken by surprise, and a pistol was thrust into her face. [See Rule 221 f.]

Be as both principal and auxiliary

(b) Do not make a single form of the verb be serve both as a principal and as an auxiliary verb.

Wrong: At first the drill was interesting and liked by most of the men.

Right: At first the drill was interesting and was liked by most of the men.

Principal verbs in a double capacity

(c) Do not supply a principal verb from one part of a sentence to another if the same form is not grammatically proper in both parts; write the proper form for each part.

Wrong: He did what many others have and are doing.

Right: He did what many others have done and are doing.

Wrong: We ate such a dinner as only laborers can.

Right: We ate such a dinner as only laborers can eat.

Than or as clause in a double capacity

(d) Two expressions of comparison, the one an adjective preceded by as, the other an adjective in the comparative degree, should not both be completed by a single as clause or a single than clause, unless that clause immediately follows the expression of comparison that stands first in the sentence.

Wrong: Fostoria is as large, if not larger, than Delaware.

Right: Fostoria is as large as Delaware, if not larger.

Wrong: He is bigger and fully as strong as Buck.

Right: He is bigger than Buck and fully as strong.

(e) Aside from cases covered by Rule d, above, two sentence-elements should never be limited by a single modifying phrase or clause unless that modifier is idiomatically adapted to both. Other modifiers in a double capacity

Wrong: He had no love or confidence in his employer.

Right: He had no love for, or confidence in, his employer. [The foregoing is correct, but awkward; the following is better:] He had no love for his employer and no confidence in him.

Wrong: I shall always remember the town because of the good times and the many friends I made there.

Right: I shall always remember the town because of the good times I had and the many friends I made there.

Wrong: He acquired a knowledge and keen interest in chess.

Right: He acquired a knowledge of chess and a keen interest in it.

(f) Two incomplete members of a sentence, the one requiring to complete it a singular noun, the other requiring a plural noun, should not both be completed by one noun, unless that noun immediately follows the incomplete member that stands first in the sentence. A noun in a double capacity Wrong: One of the greatest, if not the greatest, generals of America.

Right: One of the greatest generals of America, if not the greatest.

(g) The expressions as to, in regard to, in respect to are equivalent to single prepositions; for example, in the

To (in as to, in regard to, etc.) used in a double capacity sentence "A dispute arose in regard to the presidency," "in regard to" is equivalent to about or concerning. Such expressions are therefore called preposition-phrases (a term not to be confused with the term prepositional phrases). These preposition-phrases often have clauses for objects; e.g., in the sentence "A dispute arose as to who was president," the object of the preposition-phrase "as to" is the clause "who was president." When as to, in regard to, or in respect to thus governs a clause, the to should not be made to govern a substantive within the clause.

Wrong: A dispute arose as to whom the honor should belong.

Right: A dispute arose as to who should receive the honor. [See Rule 33 b.]

Omission of articles and possessives

91. As a rule, repeat an article or a possessive adjective before each noun in a series, unless all the nouns designate the same thing.

Wrong: Near by are a grocery, drug store, barber shop, and smithy.

Right: Near by are a grocery store, a drug store, a barber shop, and a smithy.

Wrong: She watched her grandmother, aunt, and mother sewing.

Right: She watched her grandmother, her aunt, and her mother sewing.

Wrong: I asked what were the names of her puppies and kitten.

Right: I asked what were the names of her puppies and her kitten.

Omission of prepositions

92. As a rule, a noun should not be used without a preposition, to indicate adverbially the time of an occurrence.

Bad: The preceding summer I went to England.

Right: In the preceding summer I went to England.

Bad : I was born the third of May, 1881.

Right : I was born on the third of May, 1881.

Bad : The race will occur Saturday.

Right : The race will occur on Saturday.

NOTE. — Exception to this rule may be made in the case of such expressions as last year, last month, last night, last Saturday, next year, next day, next Tuesday, some day, one day, any day, that day, this day, this afternoon; but do not make an exception for an expression (like those in the Bad examples above) which you do not know to be a well-established idiom.

Permissible exceptions

93. Do not make comparisons leaving the standard of comparison not indicated or only vaguely implied; let the standard be definitely stated or implied.

Uncompleted comparisons

Incomplete : Manufacturers have come to see the greater economy of the electric motor.

Right : Manufacturers have come to see the greater economy of the electric motor as compared to steam power.

Coördination

94. A dependent sentence-member should not be joined by and or but to the member on which it depends.

Misuse of coördinating conjunctions

Wrong : He put up signs to keep people off the grass and thereby improving the appearance of the campus.

Right : He put up signs to keep people off the grass, thereby improving the appearance of the campus.

95. Do not join a relative clause to its principal clause by and or but.

"And which" construction

Bad : He came home with an increase in weight, but which hard work soon reduced.

Bad : On the way we met a Mr. Osborn from the neighborhood of Denver and who had the typical western breeziness.

96. Violations of the foregoing rule may be corrected by (a) omitting the conjunction, (b) changing the relative clause to a principal clause, or (c) inserting a relative clause before the conjunction. Thus:

Method of correction

Right: (a) He came home with an increase in weight, which, however, hard work soon reduced; [or] (b) He came home with an increase in weight, but hard work soon reduced it.

Right: (a) On the way we met a Mr. Osborn from the neighborhood of Denver, who had the typical western breeziness; [or] (c) On the way we met a Mr. Osborn, who came from the neighborhood of Denver, and who had the typical western breeziness.

Illogical
coördina-
tion

97. An assertion should not be joined by and, but, or or to a preceding assertion with which it is not logically coördinate. Subordinate thoughts should be put into subordinate grammatical forms. (See Exercise XXXVI.)

Bad: The sheets of tin are laid in rows, and care is taken that all the sheets fit snugly. [The statement after "and" is logically subordinate to the statement preceding, but is made grammatically coördinate.]

Right: The sheets of tin are laid in rows, with care that all the sheets fit snugly.

Bad: This is done by a chemical which has the property of absorbing oxygen and giving it off again; or in other words, it is a carrier of oxygen. ["It is a carrier of oxygen" is made grammatically parallel to "This is done by a chemical;" whereas the assertion that the chemical is a carrier of oxygen is logically subordinate to the assertion that the work is done by a chemical.]

Right: This is done by a chemical which has the property of absorbing oxygen and giving it off again — or, in other words, by a carrier of oxygen.

Juvenile: It was a fine frosty morning and two seniors were walking toward college.

Right: On a fine frosty morning two seniors, etc.

Juvenile: She sat on the ground dressed in a pretty frock, and her dog was in her lap.

Right: She sat on the ground dressed in a pretty frock, holding her dog in her lap.

Juvenile: Their books were rolls of paper and only one side was written on.

Right: Their books were rolls of paper, only one side of which was written on.

Juvenile: He made an interesting speech and it lasted an hour.

Right: He made an interesting speech an hour long.

NOTE. — The lack of force and grace by which the style of an inexperienced writer is apt to be characterized is due largely to indiscriminate coördination. This fault in writing is like want of perspective in drawing. In a picture drawn by an unskillful person all the objects usually appear to be at the same distance from the observer; in one drawn by an artist the objects appear at various distances. In somewhat the same way, a style which uniformly connects statements by coördinating conjunctions differs from one which employs a variety of subordinating devices. (See Exercise XXXVII.)

Excessive
coördina-
tion

98. The adverbs so, then, and also should not be used to join coördinate verbs in a sentence; for this purpose a conjunction (and or but) must be used in addition to the adverb.

So, then,
and also used to join verbs

Wrong: He was only one among many so was not observed.

Right: He was only one among many and so was not observed.

Wrong: I paddled the boat for a while, then fell into a reverie.

Right: I paddled the boat for a while and then fell into a reverie.

99. The use of the adverb so for the purpose of compounding sentences (e.g., "The clerk was incompetent, so the governor removed him from office") is a form of expression rarely found in good literature. If so is used as a connective, the sentence it introduces should be set off from the preceding one by a period or a semicolon. (See Rule 231 b.) Even this correct use of so, however, suggests immaturity if it occurs frequently. It is advisable, in nearly all cases where one has used so as a connective, to subordinate the preceding statement and to omit the so. (See Exercise XXXVIII.)

The so habit

Incorrect and crude : His wife thought he would be thirsty so she brought a pitcher of water.

Correct but undesirable : His wife thought he would be thirsty ; so she brought a pitcher of water.

Preferable : His wife, thinking he would be thirsty, brought a pitcher of water.

Incorrect and crude : The people were opposed to him for some unknown reason, so he had to accomplish his purpose through secret agents.

Correct but undesirable : The people were opposed to him for some unknown reason. So he had to accomplish his purpose through secret agents.

Preferable : Since the people were, for some unknown reason, opposed to him, he was compelled to accomplish his purpose through secret agents.

Two but's or for's

100. Two consecutive statements should not both be introduced by but or for.

Bad : Iago became fond of Desdemona but she paid no attention to him but seemed to favor Cassio.

Bad : He suddenly paused, for it seemed wonderful that he could speak so easily, for usually he was bashful.

Method of
correction

101. Violations of the foregoing rule may usually be corrected by omitting the first but or for. Thus :

Right : Iago became fond of Desdemona. She paid no attention to him but seemed to favor Cassio.

Right : He suddenly paused ; it seemed wonderful that he could speak so easily, for usually he was bashful.

Clearness of coordination

102. In the case of several coördinate sentence members that are somewhat long or complex, care should be taken to make the relation between the members immediately apparent to the reader, so that, in beginning any member after the first, he shall instantly coördinate it with the right member preceding. To this end, the members should be introduced in a similar, often an identical, manner. General principle

Obscure coördination : Then I learned how he had run away from his father, a gypsy vagabond who professed to be a horse-trader and was in reality a thief, dressed in some clothes that he found on a scarecrow in a cornfield, learned the way to my home through the map in an old railway time-table, and come all the way on foot. [This sentence is well constructed ; its defect is that the relation between the coördinate members is not shown by similar beginnings.]

Clear coördination : Then I learned how he had run away from his father, a gypsy vagabond who professed to be a horse-trader and was in reality a thief ; how he had dressed in some clothes that he found on a scarecrow in a cornfield ; how he had learned the way to my home through the map in an old railway time-table, and had come all the way on foot.

The foregoing principle has many different applications. The following are worthy of special mention :

103. A preposition governing several objects should be repeated with each object after the first, when the construction of those objects would otherwise not be immediately clear. Repetition of prepositions

A. Not immediately clear : The place is often visited by tourists who are fond of rugged scenery, and especially amateur photographers.

Right : The place is often visited by tourists who are fond of rugged scenery, and especially by amateur photographers.

B. Not immediately clear : With the refusal of Mr. Gogins to accept the office left vacant by the resignation of Mr. Barnes and the presence of Governor Davidson in the city, the friends of Mr. Roemer were kept busy yesterday.

Clear: With the refusal of Mr. Goggins to accept the office left vacant by the resignation of Mr. Barnes, and with the presence of Governor Davidson in the city, the friends of Mr. Roemer were kept busy yesterday.

NOTE.—When the objects stand close together, repetition is usually unnecessary; e.g.,—

Right: He had lived in Cuba, Panama, and Barbadoes.
Right: It was exposed to the wind, the rain, and the scorching sun.

But when the objects are separated by intervening modifiers, as in sentences A and B, clearness usually requires that the preposition be repeated.

Repetition
of the infinitive-sign

104. An infinitive-sign (to) introducing several coördinate infinitives, should be repeated with each infinitive after the first, when the construction of those infinitives would otherwise not be immediately clear.

A. Not immediately clear: Here nature has done her best to enchant those that can see and feel, and make them her lifelong worshipers.

Right: Here nature has done her best to enchant those that can see and feel, and to make them her lifelong worshipers.

NOTE.—When the infinitives stand close together, repetition of the to is usually not necessary; e.g.,—

Right: Has he learned to dance, converse, and make himself agreeable?

But when the infinitives are separated by intervening adjuncts, as in sentence A above, repetition of the to is usually necessary to clearness.

Repetition of subordinating conjunc-
tions

105. A subordinating conjunction introducing several coördinate assertions should be repeated with each assertion after the first, when the coördination of those assertions would otherwise not be immediately clear.

Obscure coördination: When they saw the excellent structure which, though handicapped by the strike and the difficulty of getting materials, he had yet completed in less than the required time, and considered how valuable such a man would be to them, they gave him a permanent position.

Clear coördination: When they saw the excellent structure which, though handicapped by the strike and the difficulty of getting materials, he had yet completed in less than the required time, and when they considered how valuable such a man would be to them, they gave him a permanent position.

NOTE.— When the coördinate assertions are very short, repetition of the conjunction is usually not necessary; e.g.,—

Right: He seems to be pretty well, though he takes no exercise and neglects his diet.

It is only when the assertions are complex that repetition of the conjunction is necessary.

Subordination

106. Do not put a series of similar clauses or a series of similar phrases in an overlapping construction, — i.e., with the second depending on the first, the third on the second, the fourth on the third, etc. Recast the sentence.

Overlapping dependence

A. Awkward: I never knew a man who was so ready to help a friend who had got into difficulties which pressed him hard.

Right: I never knew a man so ready to help a friend who found himself hard pressed by difficulties.

B. Awkward: I was so uncomfortable that I rolled up my sleeves so far that my arms got sunburned, so that I could hardly sleep that night.

Right: Feeling very uncomfortable, I rolled up my sleeves so far that my arms got badly sunburned. The pain thus caused kept me awake most of that night

C. Awkward : There stood the big handsome motor car of the founder of the infamous combination of the manufacturers of that necessary of life, oatmeal.

Right : There stood the big handsome motor car belonging to Saunders—the man who formed the infamous combination to control the manufacture of that vital necessary, oatmeal.

Coördinate dependence

107. Note, on the other hand, that a series of similar clauses or phrases all depending on the same sentence-element gives rise to no awkwardness. (Cf. Rule 75, note.)

Right : I rise to nominate a man who has ever been stanch in his loyalty, who has long been a trusted counselor in the policies of our party, who has demonstrated his fitness for this office by the efficiency of his administration in others, whose honor has never been assailed save by calumnious envy, whose fame is destined to echo down the coming ages, who . . . etc.

Right : His face has come down to us marked with all the blemishes put on it by time, by war, by sleepless nights, by anxiety, perhaps by remorse.

Misuse of when clauses :

108. A when clause is properly used only to fix the time of an event stated in the principal clause. Hence :

For statements of primary importance

109. A statement of primary importance in a narrative should not be embodied in a when clause ; it should be embodied in an independent clause or sentence.

Bad : The thoughts of the engineer turned toward the home he was approaching when suddenly he saw the glare of fire on the track ahead.

Right : The thoughts of the engineer turned toward the home he was approaching. Suddenly he saw the glare of fire on the track ahead.

Bad : Having finished their work, they began to talk about former good times when one of the fellows suggested that they haze Nicholson.

Right: Having finished their work, they began to talk about former good times. Presently one of the fellows suggested that they haze Nicholson.

110. To put a logically principal statement in a subordinate clause and the logically subordinate statement in the principal clause is especially objectionable, unless there is some good reason for such inversion.

Upside-down subordination

Bad: I was walking down State Street yesterday when I came upon a crowd of people gathered about a horse that had fallen down.

Right: As I was walking down State Street yesterday, I came upon a crowd of people, etc.

Parallelism

111. As a rule, two or more sentence-elements that have the same logical office should be made grammatically parallel; i.e., if one is an infinitive, the other should be; if one is a relative clause, the other should be; if one is an appositive, the other should be; and so on. (See Exercise XXXIX.)

Parallel forms for analogous elements

A. Bad: The crowd began to wave handkerchiefs and shouting good-byes. ["To wave" and "shouting," both objects of "began," are awkwardly dissimilar in form.]

Right: (a) The crowd began to wave handkerchiefs and to shout good-byes; [or] (b) The crowd began waving handkerchiefs and shouting good-byes. [The two objects of "began" are made parallel; in (a) they are both infinitives, in (b) they are both gerunds.]

B. Bad: I met many people there whom I had seen before but did not know their names. ["Whom I had seen before" and "did not know their names," both qualifiers (logically) of "people," are awkwardly dissimilar in form.]

Right: I met many people there whom I had seen before but whose names I did not know. [The two qualifiers of "people" are made parallel; both are relative clauses.]

C. Bad: I delight in a good novel—one which portrays strong characters and in reading the book you are thrilled. [The two qualifiers of “one” are awkwardly dissimilar; the first (“which portrays strong characters”) is a relative clause, the second (“in reading the book you are thrilled”) a sentence.]

Right: I delight in a good novel—one which portrays strong characters and which thrills the reader. [The two qualifiers are made parallel; both are relative clauses.]

D. Bad: Two courses are open to us: first, to have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, one of our own members has volunteered to go, and we may send him. [The two logical appositives to “two courses” are awkwardly dissimilar; the first (“to have . . . field”) is a grammatical appositive, the second (“one of our own members . . . him”) a sentence.]

Right: Two courses are open to us: first, to have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, to send one of our own members, who has volunteered to go. [The two logical appositives are made parallel; both are grammatical appositives to “courses.”] [Or] Two courses are open to us. First, we may have the missionary society transfer to us a missionary now in the field; second, we may send one of our members, who has volunteered to go. [The two logical appositives are made parallel; both are sentences.]

E. Bad: I have lived in many states, some for only a short time, while in others I have lived a year or more. [The two qualifiers of the main clause are awkwardly dissimilar; the first (“some for only a short time”) is an incomplete modifier of “lived,” the second (“while . . . more”) a complete subordinate clause.]

Right: I have lived in many states,—in some for only a short time, in others for a year or more. [The two qualifiers of the main clause are made parallel; both are prepositional phrases modifying “lived.”]

F. Bad: I was asked to contribute to the church, Christian Association, and to the athletic fund. [The three modifiers of "contribute" are awkwardly dissimilar in form; the first is a complete phrase, the second a noun with both the preposition and the article lacking, the third a complete phrase.]

Right: I was asked to contribute to the church, to the Christian Association, and to the athletic fund. [The three modifiers of "contribute" are made parallel in form; each is a complete phrase.] [Or] I was asked to contribute to the church, the Christian Association, and the athletic fund. ["To" is made to govern three objects parallel in form, — each consisting of "the" and a noun.]

112. Correlative conjunctions should be followed by coordinate sentence-elements; if a predicate follows the first, a predicate should follow the second; if a modifier the first, a modifier the second; and so on. (See Exercise XXXV.) Correlatives

Wrong: They would neither speak to him nor would they look at him. ["Neither" is followed by "speak," a part of a compound verb; "nor" by "would they look," a subject and complete predicate.]

Right: They would neither speak to him nor look at him. ["Neither" and "nor" are each followed by an infinitive completing "would."]

Wrong: He is not only discourteous to the students but also to the teacher. ["Not only" is followed by an adjective, "but also" by a phrase modifying the adjective.]

Right: He is discourteous not only to the students but also to the teacher. [The correlatives are each followed by a phrase limiting "discourteous."]

113. Do not make a sentence-element similar in form to a preceding element with which it is not coordinate. Incorrect parallelism Misleading: He is a blunt, manly fellow, who admires a soldier and despises an effeminate fop, who struts about affectedly and dresses daintily.

Right: He is a blunt, manly fellow, who admires a soldier and despises an effeminate, affected, daintily dressed fop.

Junction of incongruous substan-
tives

114. Do not join by and and put in the same grammatical construction, two substantives or substantive clauses widely differing in logical function.

Bad : The story tells of the bravery and promotion of a private. ["Bravery" designates a quality, "promotion" designates an experience.]

Right : The story tells of a private's bravery and of his promotion.

Bad : He tells in vivid language how dangerous to a vessel is the breaking loose of a cannon on wheels, and how a ship's gunner captured an escaped cannon. [The substantive clause "how dangerous to a vessel is the breaking loose of a cannon" designates a general truth; the substantive clause "how a ship's gunner captured an escaped cannon" designates a specific event.]

Right : He tells in vivid language how a cannon on wheels broke from its fastenings on a ship (explaining the perils that attend such an accident), and how it was captured by a gunner.

Series form for dissimilar elements

115. The formula a, b, and c, should not be used for sentence-elements not coördinate. (See Exercise XLI.)

Bad : He was tall, slim, and wore a black coat. [Here a and b are adjectives, and c is a verb.]

Bad : We denounce the act as cruel, barbarous, and sincerely regret that it occurred. [Here a and b are adjectives and c is a verb.]

Method of
correction

116. Violations of the foregoing rule may be corrected (1) by inserting and between a and b, or (2) by conforming c to a and b. Thus :

Right : (1) He was tall and slim, and wore a black coat ; [or] (2) He was tall, slim, and attired in a black coat.

Right : (1) We denounce the act as cruel and barbarous, and sincerely regret that it occurred ; [or] (2) We denounce the act as cruel, barbarous, and worthy of condemnation by all right-thinking sophomores.

Logical Agreement

117. Every sentence-element should be in logical accord with the rest of the sentence. (In connection with this rule, see Rule 28 and Exercise XLII. See also Subject, Cause, and Reason in the Glossary.)

Logical agreement of sentence-
members

A. Bad: Of these names sixteen were chosen to be members. ["Sixteen (names)" does not agree logically with "were chosen to be members."]

Right: Of the persons named sixteen were chosen to be members.

B. Bad: The life of a hod-carrier is sometimes happier than a prince. ["The life" does not agree logically with "is happier than a prince."]

Right: The life of a hod-carrier is sometimes happier than that of a prince.

C. Illogical: He hated to submit to the rules, — viz., church attendance and not smoking. [Church attendance and abstinence from tobacco are not rules.]

Right: He hated to submit to the rules, — namely those requiring attendance at church and abstinence from smoking.

118. When a thing is compared to other members of its own class, in a statement completed by a than or an as clause, the standard of comparison in the than or the as clause should be restricted by other or else, or by an equivalent word.

Other or else in a than or as clause:

Illogical: Lead is heavier than any metal.

✓ Right: Lead is heavier than any other metal.

When correct

Illogical: Shakespeare is greater than any English poet.

✓ Right: Shakespeare is greater than any other English poet.

119. When a thing is compared to the members of a class to which it does not belong, in a statement completed by a than or an as clause, the standard of comparison in the than or as clause should not be restricted by other or else or any equivalent word.

incorrect

Illogical : That little word home means more to me than any other word of twice its length.

Right : That little word home means more to me than any word of twice its length.

The of phrase limiting a superlative

120. In the of phrase limiting an adjective or an adverb in the superlative degree, —

(a) The object of of should be a plural noun or a collective noun, not a noun designating an individual person or thing.

Illogical : He is the tallest of any man in the regiment.

Right : He is the tallest of all the men in the regiment ;
[or] He is the tallest man of the regiment.

(Right : He is taller than any other man in the regiment.)

(b) The object of of should designate a class to which the subject of comparison belongs, not a class to which it does not belong.

Illogical : Blackbirds make the best pie of all birds. [A pie cannot be the best of birds.]

Right : Blackbirds make the best pie of all game pies.

(Right : Blackbirds make better pie than any other birds.)

(c) The object of of should not be restricted by other or else or any equivalent word.

Illogical : Shakespeare is the greatest of all other English poets.

Right : Shakespeare is the greatest of all English poets.

Negation

Double negative

121. Double negative (i.e., the use, in a sentence, of two or more negative words not coördinate, — as “I could not find it nowhere”) is forbidden by modern usage. (See Exercise XLIII.)

122. Hardly, scarcely, only, and but used in the sense of only are often incorrectly joined with a negative. (See Exercise XLIV.)

negative
with hardly,
etc.

Wrong: It was so misty that we couldn't hardly see.

Right: It was so misty that we could hardly see.

Wrong: For a minute I couldn't scarcely tell where I was.

Right: For a minute I could scarcely tell where I was.

Wrong: They are not allowed to go only on Saturdays.

Right: They are allowed to go only on Saturdays.

Wrong: There isn't but one store.

Right: There is but one store.

Redundance

123. Avoid tautology, — i.e., the useless repetition of an idea, in part or entire. Tautology Bad: If I had abundant wealth and plenty of resources . . .

Right: If I had abundant wealth . . .

Bad: Will you please repeat that again?

Right: Will you please repeat that?

Bad: The autobiography of my life.

Right: My autobiography.

124. Avoid pleonasm, — i.e., the use of words which do not involve repetition of thought, but which are structurally unnecessary. Pleonasm Bad: There were two hundred students went.

Right: Two hundred students went.

Bad: It has no relation as to time or place.

Right: It has no relation to time or place.

Bad: They went through with the formalities.

Right: They went through the formalities.

125. Avoid burdening a statement with too many words. Wordiness

Wordy: Yesterday I had occasion to be a witness of a very interesting incident.

✓ Right: Yesterday I saw an interesting incident.

Wordy: At midnight the physician made a statement saying that the governor was better.

Right: At midnight the physician stated that the governor was better.

Wordy: By a little inquiry on my part, I found that he was a Nihilist.

Right: By a little inquiry I found that he was a Nihilist.

See also the Bad examples under Rules 16 and 129, note.

Repetition of Words

Repetition
with a change of meaning

126. Do not use a word in two senses in the same sentence or within a short space.

Bad: Since several years passed since the death of his wife . . .

Right: Several years having passed since the death of his wife . . .

Bad: I couldn't get up courage to get up and investigate.

Right: I couldn't summon courage to get up and investigate.

Awkward

127. Avoid awkward and needless repetition of a word or phrase.

Bad: MacArthur was to speak on that day; hence we selected that day for our trip.

Bad: He said that the orders said that uniforms must be worn in future.

Method of
correction

128. Violations of the foregoing rule are usually best corrected by recasting, not by merely substituting synonyms for the repeated words. Thus:

Right: That was the day on which MacArthur was to speak; we therefore selected it for our trip.

Right: He said that the orders required the wearing of uniforms in future.

Awkward avoidance of repetition

129. Prefer repetition, however, to labored and awkward avoidance of it.

Awkward: If it has this effect on a healthy skin, it will have a worse result on an inflamed cuticle.

Preferable: If it has this effect on a healthy skin, it will have a worse effect on an inflamed skin.

NOTE. — A constant straining for conspicuous synonyms to use in referring to something previously mentioned is a characteristic mannerism of newspaper writers (cf. Rules 2 c and 16). Avoid this practice; repeat the noun, or else choose an inconspicuous synonym. Straining for synonyms

Bad: At the faculty meeting yesterday the question of football was again discussed. Those of that learned aggregation who opposed the gridiron game succumbed at the final vote. [See Rule 125.]

Improved: At the faculty meeting yesterday the question of football was again discussed. The opponents of the game were defeated at the final vote.

Bad: The extreme warm weather during the past several weeks has not exactly been conducive of producing record-breaking scores at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys. In fact it has almost been too warm for even the most ardent lovers of the tenpin game, and enthusiasm has for some time been at a rather low ebb. [See Rule 125.]

Right: The extremely warm weather of the past several weeks has discouraged the production of high scores at the Y. M. C. A. bowling alleys. It has been almost too warm for even the most enthusiastic bowlers, and the general interest in the game has been slight.

Bad: President Roosevelt is willing to mediate in the telegraphers' strike if the key men and their employers request him to act as arbiter in the big tie-up. [See Rule 125.]

Right: President Roosevelt is willing to mediate in the telegraphers' strike if the telegraphers and their employers request his services.

130. When the conjunction that is separated by intervening words from the subject and predicate which it introduces, guard against the careless repetition of that.

Careless repetition
of the conjunction that

Wrong : It is pleasant to reflect that after all this work has been done and all these difficulties have been conquered, that we shall get a good rest.

Right : It is pleasant to reflect that after all this work has been done and all these difficulties have been conquered, we shall get a good rest.

Euphony

Concurrence of like sounds

131. For euphony, avoid a succession of like sounds. Avoid rhyme in prose.

Not euphonious : The chilling blasts blowing with cutting force.

Bad : My first year was the best of my college career.

Bad : Then came the time for the heart-breaking leave-taking.

Bad : The fountains were kept playing night and day to keep up the display.

Absolute phrases :

132. Absolute phrases are often a useful aid to proper subordination and to smoothness of style. But there are two kinds of absolute phrases which, being conspicuously awkward, are best avoided ; viz.,

Absolute pronoun

(a) Absolute phrases in which the substantive is a pronoun.

Clumsy : He gave up the task, it being too difficult.

Better : He gave up the task as too difficult.

Clumsy : I being unacquainted with the road, my party got lost.

Better : Since I was unacquainted with the road, my party got lost.

NOTE.—Such an absolute phrase is particularly objectionable when the pronoun refers to the subject of the sentence. In such cases wordiness is added to awkwardness, since the pronoun is pleonastic (see Rule 124).

Bad : I made a trip to Catalina Island in 1902, I being then in my tenth year.

Better : I made a trip to Catalina Island in 1902, being then in my tenth year.

Bad : The furnace could not be repaired immediately, it being red-hot.

Better : Being red-hot, the furnace could not be repaired immediately.

(b) Absolute phrases in which the substantive is modified by a perfect participle, especially a passive perfect participle. Such phrases are clumsy, unidiomatic, and suggestive of elementary Latin exercises. Latinistic phrases

Better : When his horse had been fed, Macy continued his journey.

Variety

133. Do not make many sentences in a composition or a passage monotonously alike in construction. This principle is often violated (a) by beginning many sentences near each other with after, with this or these, or with there is or there are ; (b) by using with noticeable frequency a compound sentence with two members of about equal length joined by and or but ; (c) by using participial or absolute phrases with noticeable frequency ; and (d) by the habitual use of so as a connective (cf. Rule 99). Forms of expression noticeably frequent

Structure of Larger Units of Discourse

Unity of a Composition

134. A composition should treat a single subject and should treat it throughout according to a self-consistent method. The general principle

The following composition is an example of the violation of unity by failure to hold to one subject :

OUR TRIP UP SPRUCE CREEK

While I was in Port Orange, Mr. Doty, the proprietor of the hotel there, took some of his guests five miles up Spruce Creek on a launch. It was the third of February. As the boat steamed up the creek, we stood on the deck, some of us taking pictures and others shooting at alligators with revolvers. The alligators are of all sizes. Sometimes you will see one seven or eight feet long, lying on the bank in the sunshine. As the boat goes past, he slides into the water and swims away with only his head above the water. When we have gone a little farther, we see another alligator about four feet long, with ten or twelve little ones crawling over her back.

When the launch has gone about five miles, it stops at the wharf of an orange grove. Here the passengers are allowed to take all the oranges they want. After they have walked about the grove for a while, they have a picnic dinner, and then start back.

The writer of the foregoing composition keeps to his subject—a trip which he took up Spruce Creek on February 3—for only three sentences. After the third sentence he shifts to a different subject—the Spruce Creek trips in general—and throughout the rest of the composition forgets all about “our trip.” Unity may be given to this composition (a) by making it entirely a narrative, dealing with the trip of February 3; or (b) by making it, throughout, a general discussion of the Spruce Creek picnics provided by Mr. Doty.

Too big
a subject

135. A very small essay on a very large subject—such as Character, Patriotism, Selfishness, Advertising, The Waste of Energy—usually violates the principle of unity. It usually consists of a number of brief scraps of discussion, each dealing with a different division of the subject. The divisions of so large a subject are themselves large; the essay therefore reads like a fragmentary and disconnected treatment of a number of distinct subjects, not like a connected treatment of a single subject.

When a short essay is to be written on a big subject, it is best to choose some single, well-defined phase of the subject. For example, choose The Difference between Character and Reputation, rather than Character; The Work of Patriotic Women during the Spanish-American War, rather than Patriotism; Selfishness in the Conduct of Students toward their Parents, rather than Selfishness; Advertising as a Necessary Measure of Self-Defense, rather than Advertising; The Value of a Daily Schedule, rather than The Waste of Energy; How Students' Adversities aid them toward Success, rather than Success.

136. In reproducing a story (e.g., the story of Macbeth) or in composing a story, do not shift carelessly between the present and the past tenses. Decide at the beginning which tense to use, and use it consistently. (Cf. Rule 19.)

Shifting
the tense
in narrative

137. In a story the opening events of which are told as having been seen or participated in by the narrator, the introduction of events or speeches or thoughts which the narrator, according to his own account, could not have seen or heard or known, is a flagrant violation of unity.

Shifting
the point of view in narrative

Thus, the italicized part of the following extract violates unity:

I strolled down to the boat-house at six o'clock yesterday evening. As I got there a row-boat was approaching the wharf containing a man and a girl who I judged must have arrived from the country very recently. They had started for Picnic Point at two o'clock. On the way the young man had had great difficulty at the unfamiliar work of rowing. Often his oars would slip and send a shower of water into the girl's lap, at which he would say, "Oh, I am so sorry!" and she would reply, "Oh, that's all right." . . . As they neared the wharf, he was anxiously wondering whether he could land without accident. Jimmy, the keeper of the boat-house, stood ready to assist at the disembarkation. . . .

A story in which unity is thus violated may be corrected (a) by omitting all events, speeches, and thoughts of which the narrator could not, according to his own account, have been aware at the time they took place (e.g., omitting the italicized passage in the story quoted); (b) by introducing all such events, speeches, and thoughts as having been learned by the narrator after they took place (e.g., making the oarsman in the above-quoted story tell the narrator, in a subsequent conversation, what is improperly related in the italicized passage); or (c) by omitting all reference to the narrator—telling everything impersonally (e.g., omitting from the above-quoted story all preceding the italicized part and continuing without any reference to the narrator).

Shifting
the tense
in description

138. If a description is introduced by narrative, with the object of picturing a thing as it appeared on a certain occasion in the past, the past tense should be used throughout the composition; carelessly shifting to the present tense changes the point of view and violates unity.

Shifting from point of view of one person to that of another

139. Do not change the point of view of a composition or of a passage by shifting carelessly from I to one, from we to the observer, from you to a person, etc. Keep consistently to one point of view unless there is good reason for changing.

Organization of a Composition

The general principle

140. In order that a composition be effective, it must not merely contain good thoughts or interesting statements; it must be a well-organized whole. It can not be a well-organized whole if the writer puts down thoughts or statements at haphazard, just as they occur to him. To get good organization, a writer must proceed by a definite plan; that is, he must, before he begins to write, or at least before he puts the composition into its final form, decide on a few topics, and on each topic write a passage (see Rule 142), constituting a unit of the whole composition. Unless this plan of organization is followed, the composition is likely to be a mere collection of pieces — not a well-made whole. The pieces may be individually good, but the composition is poor. As in warfare a band of men, though strong and brave individually, is collectively weak if it is not well organized; so a speech, a report, an editorial, an essay, any composition, though its parts may be forcible or clever, is weak as a whole if it is not well organized.

For example, an essay on Denver consists of a short paragraph on each of the following topics:

1. Location.
2. History.
3. Local pride.
4. Water supply (derived from mountain snow).
5. Capitol and United States mint.
6. Museums.
7. Principal businesses.
8. Dwelling houses (none built of wood).
9. Schools.
10. Wealth of citizens.
11. The city as a health resort.
12. Churches.
13. Strange spectacle of men skating in winter in their shirtsleeves.

This production, however interesting its material, is as far from being a good composition as two wheels, a diamond frame, a chain, and a pair of handle bars, all piled in a heap, are from being a good bicycle. It is a series of haphazard remarks not organized into a whole. There is no reason for most of the parts' standing where they are — no reason, e.g., for discussing public buildings after the water supply, or skaters' costumes after churches. The material of this essay may be organized into a whole by the method shown in the following outline. The numbers within the brackets refer to parts of the preceding outline.

- I. History. [2]
- II. Location and climate. [Put 1 and 13 here—13 as an illustration of the statements about the climate.]
- III. Especially striking peculiarities of the city.
  1. Evidences of its being a health resort. [11]
  2. Absence of wooden buildings. [8]
  3. Public buildings. [5]
  4. Water supply. [4]
  5. Most striking of all, — local pride. [3]
- IV. Conditions of the people's life.
  1. Economic : Principal occupations. General wealth. [7 and 10]
  2. Educational and moral: Schools, museums, churches. [9, 6, and 12]

Passages misplaced

141. Material belonging to one part of an essay should not be placed carelessly in another part.

In the following paragraph, the italicized sentence is evidently misplaced :

The physical training department of our college is very good and is constantly improving. A good gymnasium for the women is greatly needed, to replace the present unsatisfactory make-shift. As I am more acquainted with the work of the girls, I shall confine myself to the physical training provided for them.

The italicized sentence does not belong in this introductory part, but in a subsequent part, — viz., that which discusses the equipment for the girls' exercise.

Unity and completeness of each part...

142. In an expository essay each of the passages constituting the major units (see the third sentence of Rule 140) should be somewhat like a distinct composition; just as a military company is a complete organization within itself, as well as a unit in a regiment. In other words, each main division of the essay should be a well-organized, well-introduced, well-concluded whole, which would seem rounded and complete if it stood by itself.

Coherence

143. The opening sentences of a formal composition should be self-explanatory; they should be clear to the reader without reference to the title of the composition. Coherent beginning

Bad :

LAMPS

They are contrivances for furnishing artificial light. . . .

Right :

LAMPS

Lamps are contrivances for furnishing artificial light. . . .

Bad :

MY WORK DURING THE PAST TERM

Latin and German were more difficult than any other studies. . . .

Right :

MY WORK DURING THE PAST TERM

In my work during the past term, I had more difficulty with Latin and German than with any other studies.

144. The beginning of a new division, either of a whole composition or of a paragraph, should be clearly marked, so that the reader will not begin reading the new division supposing that the preceding division still continues. For marking the beginning of a new part, the following are useful means : Distinct introduction of a new part

(a) A transitional sentence or group of sentences, such as the following :

So much for [the subject of the preceding division].
It remains to mention [the subject of the new division].

Transition sentence or paragraph

(b) Connective words, phrases, and other expressions, such as again; in the second place; another cause of [the subject under which the several divisions fall]; equally important with the preceding consideration is . . . ; etc.

Connective words
and phrases

Placing key words at the beginning

(c) Placing near the beginning of the first sentence of the new division the word or words that indicate the subject of the new division. For example, after discussing the abuses of college athletics, to begin a new division with the words "The remedy . . ." makes the change of topic immediately evident. After discussing a statesman's foreign policy, to begin a new division with the words "His internal administration . . ." makes the change of topic immediately evident.

Coherence of a statement of consequence

145. When a sentence or a passage states a consequence of what precedes, this relation, unless it is immediately obvious, should be indicated by some connective word, phrase, or other expression, such as therefore, hence, for this reason, the result is . . ., etc.

Coherence
of an abatement

146. When a passage makes an abatement from a preceding assertion, this relation should usually be indicated by some connective, such as to be sure; I admit; there is, to be sure, an exception . . .; etc.

Coherence
of a contrasting part

147. When a passage makes a statement contrasting with what precedes, this relation should usually be indicated by some connective, such as but, yet, on the other hand, nevertheless, however, etc.

Coherence
of a contradiction

148. Lack of connective words or sentences between a statement and a contradiction of it is especially apt to cause incoherence.

Incoherent: Some people think clerking is an easy job and that a clerk ought never to be tired. Clerks stay closely housed day after day, working from six in the morning to ten at night. . . .

Coherent [the necessary connective is supplied]: Some people think the occupation of a clerk is easy and that a clerk ought never to be tired. This is not the case. In the first place, clerks stay closely housed day after day, etc.

II. PUTTING DISCOURSE ON PAPER

Spelling

149. A monosyllable or a word accented on the last syllable, if it ends in one consonant preceded by one vowel, doubles the final consonant when a suffix beginning with a vowel is added. Thus: bid, bidden ; quiz, quizzes. (See Exercises XLV, XLVI.)

Doubling final consonants:
General
rule

150. From the foregoing rule it follows that a verb of one syllable or a verb accented on the last syllable, if it ends in one consonant preceded by one vowel, doubles the final consonant when ed or ing is added. Thus: drop, dropped, dropping. (See Exercises XLV, XLVI.)

Before
ing and ed

151. Words ending in silent e usually drop the e before a suffix beginning with a vowel. Thus: love, lovable ; stone, stony. (See Exercises XLVII, XLVIII.)

Dropping final e:
General
rule

152. From the foregoing rule it follows that a verb ending in silent e drops the e when ing is added. Thus: shine, shining. (See Exercise XLVIII.)

Before
ing

153. An exception to Rule 151: Words ending in ce or ge do not drop the e when ous or able is added. Thus: notice, noticeable ; outrage, outrageous. (See Exercise XLIX.)

Derivatives from words in ce and ge

NOTE. — C and g in words of French, Latin, and Greek derivation usually have the soft sound before e, i, and y, as cede, genial, civil, giant, cyanide, gymnasium ; elsewhere they have the hard sound, as calendar, Gallic, code, gorgon, acute, gusto. (Get, geese, gew-gaw, geld, giddy, gift, gig, giggle, gild, begin, gird, girdle, girl, and give are not of the above-mentioned derivation.) Notice how the principle applies to accent, accident, flaccid, occiput, accept, accurate, desiccate, except, excuse. On account of this principle, the e must be retained in such words as noticeable and courageous, in order to keep the soft sound of c and g.

Change of y to i: 154. A noun ending in y preceded by a consonant forms the plural in ies; as library, libraries. A noun ending in y preceded by a vowel forms the plural in ys; as valley, valleys. (See Exercise L.)

Nouns
Verbs 155. A verb ending in y preceded by a consonant forms its present third singular in ies and its past in ied. Thus: rely, relies, relied; marry, marries, married. (See Exercise LI.)

Change of ie to y 156. Verbs ending in ie change ie to y before ing. Thus: lie, lying. (See Exercise LII.)

Plurals in s and es 157. Nouns ending in a consonant add es, to form the plural, when the plural has an extra syllable; when the plural has no extra syllable, they add only s. Thus: lass, lasses; lad, lads. (See Exercise LIII.)

Present third singular in s and es 158. Verbs ending in a consonant add es to make the present third singular form when that form has an extra syllable; when it has no extra syllable, they add only s. Thus: miss, misses; proclaim, proclaims. (See Exercise LIV.)

Receive,
believe, etc. 159. In case of doubt whether to use the digraph ei or the digraph ie in words like receive and believe, the question may be determined by reference to the word Celia. If c precedes the digraph, e follows the c, as in Celia. Thus: receive, conceive, perceive, deceive. If l precedes the digraph, i follows the l, as in Celia. Thus: believe, relieve. (See Exercise LXI.)

Principal and principle 160. In case of doubt whether to use principal or principle, remember that the word which contains a (principal) is the adjective, and the other word the noun. (See Exercises LXXI, LXXII.)

NOTE.—Principal meaning a school officer is an adjective modifying a noun (officer) understood. Principal meaning a sum of money is an adjective modifying a noun (sum) understood.

161. In modern prose (the rule does not hold in poetry) the spellings O and oh of the common interjection are employed as follows: O is used when the interjection serves as the poetic or archaic sign of direct address; as "I am come, O Caesar," "O ye spirits of our fathers," "O God, we pray thee," "I fear for thee, O my country." When the interjection is used in any other way than as the sign of direct address,—that is, in the great majority of cases,—it is spelled oh; e.g., "Oh no, it is no trouble," "Oh! you ought not to do that," "My child! oh, my child!" "I will do it—and oh, by the way, where's the key?"

O and oh

NOTE.—O should always be capitalized, and, when used in the manner stated above, should not be followed by any mark of punctuation. Oh is not capitalized except at the beginning of a sentence, and may be followed by an exclamation point, a comma, or no mark at all.

Punctuation with O and oh

162. The misspelling of the following words should be avoided with particular care:

oneself	whatever	nevertheless
anybody	whichever	nowadays

Legibility

165. Let a liberal space intervene between consecutive lines in a manuscript. Do not let the loops of f's, g's, j's, q's, y's, and z's in any line descend below the general level of the loops of b's, f's, h's, k's, and l's, in the line below. (Compare Plates I and II.)

PLATE II

Extra space after period, etc.

167. Between a period, a question mark, an exclamation mark, a semicolon, a colon, a word immediately before a direct quotation, the last word of a direct quotation,—between any of these and a word following on the same line, leave double the usual space between words. (See Plate II, lines 1, 2, 3, and 9; and compare the corresponding places in Plate I.)

Crowding
marks of punctua-
tion

168. Do not crowd marks of punctuation close to one another or to the words next them. (See Plate I, lines 1, 2, and 9, and compare the corresponding places in Plate II.)

Crowding
of page

169. Do not crowd the writing at the bottom of a page; take a new page.

Gaps between
letters

170. Do not leave gaps between consecutive letters in a word. Especially avoid leaving a wide interval between an initial capital and the rest of the word.

Oblique
and

171. Do not write and on an oblique line.

Dots and cross-strokes

172. Do not neglect dotting i's and j's and crossing t's and x's.

173. Place the cross of a t across the stem of the t, not elsewhere. Place the dot of an i or a j immediately above the i or the j, not elsewhere.

174. Making the crosses of t's conspicuous for their length, peculiar shape, or peculiar direction is a hindrance to legibility and an annoyance to the reader. Cross a t with a straight horizontal stroke not more than a quarter of an inch long.

Shape of quotation marks and apostrophes

175. Form quotation marks and apostrophes, not as in this illustration:

Annie's motto is "What's the use?"

but as in this:

Annie's motto is "What's the use?"

176. Write Roman numbers, not in this manner:

II, III, IV, VIII, IX

Shape of Roman numbers

but in this:

II, III, IV, VIII, IX

177. In forming a letter do not decorate with flourishes not necessary for identifying it, or with conspicuous shading. Avoid especially such forms as the following:

Conspicuous
ornament

B. C. D. E. F. H. M. N. O. T

Prefer plain forms like the following:

B. C. D. E. F. H. M. N. O. T

Arrangement of Manuscript

The Manuscript as a Whole

178. The paper for the manuscript of a literary composition should be unruled, unless special circumstances, such as the regulations of a class, require the contrary. The writing should be done either with a typewriter or with black ink. Only one side of each sheet of paper should be written on. A manuscript should never be rolled; it should go to its destination either flat, or folded as simply as possible.

Writing materials

Only one side of paper to be used

Rolling not permissible

Pages

179. The pages of a manuscript should be numbered at the top, in Arabic, not Roman numbers.

numbers

180. The title should be written at least two inches from the top of the page. Between the title and the first line of the composition, at least an inch should intervene.

Position
of title

181. The first line of each page should stand at least an inch from the top of the page.

Margin at the top

182. There should be a blank margin of at least two inches at the left side of each page.

the left

ParagraphsMechanical Marks of a Paragraph

Indention: Of ordinary paragraphs      183. In manuscript the first line of every paragraph should be indented at least an inch. (See Plate II, line 1.)

Of numbered paragraphs      184. No exception to the foregoing rule should be made when paragraphs are numbered.

Wrong:

I. What power has Congress to punish crimes?

II. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.

III. How are presidential electors chosen? Would it be constitutional for a State legislature to choose them?

Right:

I. What power has Congress to punish crimes?

II. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.

III. How are presidential electors chosen? Would it be constitutional for a State legislature to choose them?

Irregular indention      185. The first lines of all paragraphs should begin at the same distance from the margin; do not indent the beginning of one paragraph an inch, that of another two inches, that of another half an inch, etc.

Incorrect indention      186. No line except the first line of a paragraph should be indented in the slightest.

Incorrect spacing out      187. After the end of a sentence do not leave the remainder of the line blank unless the sentence ends a paragraph; begin the next sentence on the same line, if there is room. This rule is violated in Plate I, line 4.

Division of a Composition into ParagraphsParagraphing as an Aid to Clearness

The fundamental principle      188. Paragraphing, if properly employed, gives the reader as much assistance in understanding a whole composition as punctuation gives him in understanding a sentence. Parts of a composition that are distinct in topic may by paragraphing be made distinct to the eye also, — an effect that decidedly promotes clearness. For instance, suppose an essay on Queen Elizabeth discusses three topics: (1) Elizabeth's personal character, (2) her character as a ruler, and (3) her popularity with her subjects. To embody the three passages corresponding to these three topics in separate paragraphs makes evident at once the beginning and the end of each passage, and thus enables the reader to grasp without effort the structure of the essay. On this consideration are based the following rules (189–193):

189. A passage entirely distinct in topic from what precedes and follows should (except when Rule 207 applies) be written as a separate paragraph.

Applications:
(i) Paragraphing
of distinct parts

Thus, suppose an essay on gasoline engines presents —

- (m) An explanation of the operation of gasoline engines.
- (n) An estimate of gasoline engines as compared with other kinds of engines.

Parts m and n should be embodied in separate paragraphs. Suppose a story tells —

- (m) The hero's visit to the bank and his transactions there.
- (n) What was happening meanwhile at the hero's factory.

Parts m and n should be embodied in separate paragraphs.

190. A passage that serves as an introduction or a conclusion to a composition consisting of several paragraphs should be paragraphed separately, even if it consists of only one or two sentences.

Paragraphs of introduction and conclusion

Correct paragraphing:

The large body of recent State legislation compelling railway companies to reduce passenger fares, though it probably sprang from good intentions, is likely to have three unfortunate consequences.

[The main body of the essay consists of three paragraphs, each discussing one of the three unfortunate consequences.]

One can not foretell, of course, how many years will elapse before these three results of the recent railway legislation will work themselves out; it may be five years, or it may be a dozen. But that they will sooner or later work themselves out seems, in the light of history, practically certain.

Paragraphs of transition

191. A passage that serves merely to make a transition from one group of paragraphs to a following group should be paragraphed separately.

Correct paragraphing:

[The achievements of Macaulay as a man of letters are discussed for three or four paragraphs.]

Macaulay's political achievements, though less distinguished than his literary achievements, are worthy of a somewhat detailed notice.

[Two or three paragraphs follow, dealing with Macaulay's political career.]

Para-
graphing
of direct quotations

192. In narratives, as a rule, any direct quotation, together with the rest of the sentence of which it is a part, should be paragraphed separately. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

Right:

There were no takers. Not a man believed him capable of the feat. Thornton had been hurried into the wager, heavy with doubt; and now that he looked at the sled itself, the concrete fact, with the regular team of ten dogs curled up in the snow before it, the more impossible the task appeared. Mathewson waxed jubilant.

"Three to one," he proclaimed. "I'll lay you another thousand at that figure, Thornton. What d'ye say?"

Thornton's doubt was strong in his face, but his fighting spirit was aroused — the fighting spirit that soars above odds, fails to recognize the impossible, and is deaf to all save the clamor for battle. He called Hans and Pete to him. Their sacks were . . .

193. Rule 192 should be especially observed in the Dialogue report of a conversation ; each speech, regardless of length, should be paragraphed separately. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

Wrong :

"When did you arrive ?" I asked. "An hour ago," he answered. "Didn't you get my letter ?" "No." "Strange," he said.

Right :

"When did you arrive ?" I asked.
"An hour ago," he answered. "Didn't you get my letter ?"
"No."
"Strange," he said.

194. Observe that in order to paragraph an isolated quotation separately (as is done in the example under Rule 192), the line following the quotation must be indented.

Indention
after a quotation

195. A quotation may be detached by paragraphing from the introductory expression (e.g., he said) if this expression precedes it.

Indention
in the midst of a sentence

Right :

Mr. Peggotty looked round upon us and nodding his head with a lively expression animating his face, said in a whisper,
"She's been thinking of the old 'un."

But a quotation should not be so detached from the introductory expression if the quotation does not close the sentence.

Wrong :

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him,
"Come on. Who's afraid ?" and started into the house.

Wrong :

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him,
"Come on. Who's afraid ?"
and started into the house.

Right:

Thinking I could stand it if my friend could, I called out to him, "Come on. Who's afraid?" and started into the house.

(ii) Grouping of related parts

196. When several consecutive short passages present slightly different topics, yet collectively form a larger division, distinct from other divisions of the composition, it is disadvantageous to write the short passages apart from each other, for this gives the reader no visible indication of the distinctness and unity of the larger division. The distinctness and unity of the whole division should be made apparent, rather than the individuality of its parts. Hence the following rule:

Improper paragraphing of minute parts

197. Several consecutive short passages composing a larger unit of a composition should not be written each in a separate paragraph, but should be combined into one paragraph.

Thus in an essay on a steel factory, describing —

- (a) The process of sheet-rolling,
- (b) The process of rail-rolling,
- (c) The process of casting,

part b should not be written as follows:

Steel ingots six feet long and six inches square were heated to a white heat in a large oven.

When sufficiently hot, an ingot was removed and taken on an endless chain to the first set of rollers.

These rollers were eighteen inches in diameter. When the ingot had been passed through them, it was a bar of steel ten feet long and five inches thick.

Then the bar of steel was put on another endless chain and taken to a second pair of rollers.

This process was continued, the bar being passed successively through five or six pairs of rollers.

It came from the last pair a red-hot rail of standard size.

It was next bent slightly so that the base was convex. This was to allow for unequal contraction in cooling.

The rail was now left to cool.

When cold, it was taken to the cold rollers and rolled perfectly straight.

The foregoing passage should be written as a single paragraph; and so should part a and part c of the same essay.

198. The beginning of a new paragraph naturally leads the reader to think that the discussion of a new topic is beginning. Therefore, to begin a new paragraph where the discussion of a new topic does not begin misleads the reader. Hence the following rule:

(iii) Paragraphing where there is no change of topic

199. A sentence that does not introduce a new topic but continues the topic of the preceding sentence should not be made to begin a new paragraph.

The paragraphing in the following passage, for example, is illogical and objectionable:

The beauty of Fra Angelico's character has been the admiration of all who ever studied the life of that devout and gentle artist. He might have lived in ease and comfort, for his art would have made him rich; instead, he chose the cloister life. Fra Angelico was gentle and kindly to all.

He was never seen to display anger and if he admonished his friends, it was with mildness. . . .

In this passage, the discussion of the gentleness of Fra Angelico begins in the sentence "Fra Angelico was gentle," etc.; the sentence "He was never," etc., continues the discussion of this topic—does not introduce a new topic. Hence, there should be no paragraph division where one now stands; the sentence "He was never," etc., should follow without a break.

200. A paragraph, by its visible detachment from what precedes and follows, suggests the unity of the pas-

(iv) Unity of a paragraph sage it embodies. A passage not having unity should therefore not be put into one paragraph and thus presented under the guise of unity. Hence the following rule :

201. See that every paragraph has one central topic, under which all the statements in the paragraph logically fall.

NOTE. — The presence, in a paragraph of an expository essay, of several passages not belonging, or seeming not to belong, to a single topic, usually points to bad organization of the essay (see Rules 140, 141), or to bad organization of the passage embodied in the paragraph (see Rule 142).

Paragraphing for Emphasis

Sentences made conspicuous by detachment

202. A sentence or a short passage which the writer wishes to make especially emphatic may be paragraphed separately.

Thus, in the following passage the italicized part does not require to be paragraphed as being distinct from the preceding part ; but it may properly be set apart for emphasis.

Indefinite narrative should not be entirely avoided ; it is useful, and for some purposes is preferable to concrete narrative. Parts of a story that are not of dramatic interest, speeches that are of no interest or importance, — these may properly be conveyed by indefinite rather than by concrete narrative. But remember this :

Actions occurring at important points of a story should be related by concrete, not indefinite narrative.

Paragraphing for Ease in Reading

Unbroken text fa-tiguings

203. Reading an extended composition or passage in the text of which there are no breaks to rest the eye, is fatiguing. Hence the following rules (204 and 205) :

Neglect of para-
graphing

204. A composition more than 300 words long should not be written without paragraphing.

205. A passage more than 300 words long, even if it constitutes a single unit of the composition, should usually not be written as a single paragraph, but should be divided into two or three paragraphs of convenient length (i.e., not longer than 200 words). Paragraphs
too long

Thus, an essay on Lincoln, presenting —

1. A narrative of his life (350 words)
2. An estimate of his greatness (100 words) should not be written as two paragraphs corresponding to the two main divisions of the material, but should be paragraphed in some such way as the following :

- ¶ Events of life up to 1860 (200 words)
- ¶ Career as president (150 words)
- ¶ Estimate of his greatness (100 words)

206. On the other hand, it should be remembered that reading a passage not more than about 200 words long is not fatiguing to the ordinary reader, and that over-frequent paragraphing annoys as much as lack of any paragraphing fatigues. Hence the following rules (207 and 208) : Over-frequent para-
graphing

207. A composition no longer than 150 words should usually be written without any paragraph divisions.

208. Do not paragraph with needless frequency and without good reason.

Writing Verse

209. If an entire line of poetry can not be written on one line of the page, the part left over should be placed as shown below : Left-over parts of lines

Right :

Lombard and Venetian merchants with deep-laden
argosies ;
Ministers from twenty nations ; more than royal pomp and ease.

Wrong:

Lombard and Venetian merchants with deep-laden
argosies;
Ministers from twenty nations; more than royal pomp and ease.

Grouping of verse into lines

210. A quotation of poetry should be grouped into lines exactly as the original is grouped.

Bad:

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood for the Good or evil side.

Right:

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide
In the strife of truth with falsehood for the good or evil side.

Verse set apart on
the page

211. A quotation of verse occurring in a prose composition should begin on a new line. The prose following such a quotation should also begin on a new line, indented if it begins a new paragraph, flush with the left-hand margin if it continues the paragraph containing the quotation.

Wrong:

While Tennyson admits that sorrow may be for our ultimate advantage and that, as his great memorial says, "Men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things," yet he finds it impossible to get any present consolation from the thought.

Right:

While Tennyson admits that sorrow may be for our ultimate advantage and that, as his great memorial says,
"Men may rise on stepping stones
Of their dead selves to higher things," yet he finds it impossible to get any present consolation from the thought.

See also the first Right example under Rule 246; and see p. v.

Extended Quotations of Prose

212. A passage of prose quoted from a written composition or a formal speech, if it is three or four sentences long or longer, should be set apart from the matter preceding and following it, in the same way as a quotation of verse (see Rule 211).

Extended quotations set apart on
the page

Right:

The part of the letter of instructions providing for an examination of candidates I quote verbatim. This part is as follows:

"and that, furthermore, all candidates be examined as to their knowledge of constitutional law; that this examination be conducted in writing; and that the following questions, among others, be asked:

"1. What power has Congress to punish crimes?

"2. State in what cases the Supreme Court has original jurisdiction.

"3. How are presidential electors chosen? Would it be constitutional for a state legislature to choose them?"

These instructions, it will be perceived, leave the committee no discretion in regard to waiving the examination.

For other examples see Rules 137, 141, 199, 202.

Tabulated Lists

213. In a list of items set down in tabular form, the first line of each item should extend farther to the left than the remaining lines of the item.

Intention

Wrong:

The principal powers of the President are—

(a) The power to conduct foreign affairs.

(b) The power to command the army and navy in time of war.

(c) The power to veto bills.

(d) The power to appoint officers (subject to the approval of the Senate).

Right:

The principal powers of the President are —

- (a) The power to conduct foreign affairs.
- (b) The power to command the army and navy in time of war.
- (c) The power to veto bills.
- (d) The power to appoint officers (subject to the approval of the Senate).

Tabulated matter set
the page

214. A list of items in tabular form should be set apart from the matter preceding and following it, in the same manner as a quotation of verse (see Rule 211).

Bad:

Under this subject there are three important headings:

- (a) Position of pronouns
- (b) Use of connectives
- (c) Position of phrases; all of which are to be carefully studied.

Right:

Under this subject there are three important headings:

- (a) Position of pronouns
- (b) Use of connectives
- (c) Position of phrases

all of which are to be carefully studied.

NOTE. — Another way of correcting the errors above shown is to write the passage without tabulating the items; thus:

Right: Under this subject there are three important headings: (a) Position of pronouns; (b) Use of connectives; and (c) Position of subordinate expressions; all of which are to be carefully studied.

For other illustrations of the rule see Rules 140, 189, 197.

Alterations in Manuscript

Insertion

215. Words to be inserted should be written above the line, and their proper position should be indicated by the sign  $\wedge$  (not "v") placed below the line. Words so inserted should not be enclosed in parentheses or brackets unless these marks would be required were the words written on the line.

NOTE. — Obscurity results from writing an insertion in the manner shown in the Bad example below:

Bad:

Although tennis is at present very popular <sup>as an agreeable means</sup> ~~it probably~~ of exercising the muscles, will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

Right:

Although tennis is at present very popular <sup>as an agreeable means of exercising the muscles,</sup> ~~it probably~~ will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

Right:

Although tennis is at present very popular <sup>as an agreeable means</sup> ~~it probably~~ of exercising the muscles, it probably will never rank with football as a game for supremacy between colleges.

216. Erasures should be made by drawing a line through the words to be canceled. Parentheses or brackets should not be used for this purpose. Erasure

217. Words written in one place which are to be transposed to another, should be canceled (see Rule 216) and inserted in the proper place by the method shown in Rule 215. No other method of transposition should be used. Transposition

218. When it is desired that a word standing in the midst of a paragraph should begin a new paragraph, the sign ¶ should be placed immediately before that word. The change should not be indicated otherwise. Indicating a new paragraph

219. A paragraph division should be canceled by writing "No ¶" in the margin. The change should not be indicated otherwise. Canceling a paragraph division

Punctuation

The Period (.)

Close of a sentence

220. Use the period —

Abbreviations

- (a) After a complete declarative or imperative sentence.
 (b) After an abbreviated word or a single or double initial letter representing a word ; as etc., viz., Mrs., i.e., e.g., LL.D., pp.

The Comma (,)<sup>1</sup>

Direct address

221. Use the comma —

- (a) To set off a substantive used in direct address.

Right: You see, John, how I stand.

- (b) To set off appositives.

Appositives

Right: Next he went to Vienna, the capital of Austria.

NOTE. — Exception to this rule should be made (1) in the case of an appositive that is a regular part of a proper name (e.g., William the Conqueror) ; and (2) in the case of appositives like the italicized expressions in the following sentences:

Right: The word beautiful is an adjective.Right: The expression "Where am I at?" is a provincialism.

Absolute phrases

- (c) To set off absolute phrases.

Right: Everything being ready, the guard blew his horn.

Parenthetical members

- (d) To set off any word or phrase which has a parenthetical function but for which parenthesis marks or double dashes are not suitable.

Right: He was satisfied, I suppose, with his situation.
 His refusal of my offer, however, I don't understand.

NOTE. — For setting off a parenthetical expression, prefer commas to parenthesis marks where commas will make the sentence clear ; but notice that the use of commas for this purpose may cause obscurity in some cases — particularly when the parenthetical expression is a complete sentence.

Obscure: By all appearances, of course this is a secret, he is likely to win.

Clear: By all appearances (of course, this is a secret) he is likely to win; [or] By all appearances — of course, this is a secret — he is likely to win [see Rule 236 c].

(e) To set off a geographical name explaining a preceding name. Geographical
names

Right: Paris, Illinois, is a smaller city than Paris, France.

(f) To separate coördinate clauses connected by one of the simple conjunctions. (Cf. Rule 231 b.) Coördi-nate clauses joined by a conjunction

Right: The train moved swiftly, but Turner arrived too late.

Right: When they at last met, and when everything was explained, they were friends again.

NOTE. — The observance of the foregoing rule is especially important in the case of clauses connected by the coördinating conjunction for. Unless a comma is placed between such clauses, the for is liable to be mistaken momentarily for a preposition. Comma before for

Misleading: It is a decided benefit for students who take exercise are not easily susceptible to sickness.

Clear: It is a decided benefit, for students who take exercise are not easily susceptible to sickness.

(g) To set off a dependent clause preceding its principal clause. When the dependent clause follows the principal clause, a comma is usually unnecessary (but see Rules h and i, below). Dependent
clauses

Right: When darkness comes, the candles are lit.

Right: The candles are lit when darkness comes.

Right: If I can, I will remove it.

Right: I will remove it if I can.

For other examples see the text of Rules 23, 48 a, 52, 145.

(h) To indicate every distinct pause within a sentence, except the pauses for which other marks of punctuation are appropriate. See, for example, the text of Rules 2, 6, 39, 46, 51, 57, 80, 88, 91, 128, 131. Distinct pauses

To prevent mistaken
junction

(i) To indicate separation between any sentence-elements that might, in reading, be improperly joined or misunderstood, were there no comma.

Misleading: Ever since Betty has loved the flag.

Clear: Ever since, Betty has loved the flag.

Misleading: On the path leading to the cellar steps were heard.

Clear: On the path leading to the cellar, steps were heard.

Consecu-
adjectives

222. Two adjectives modifying the same noun should be separated by commas if they are coördinate in thought; but if the first adjective is felt to be superposed on the second, they should not be separated by a comma.

Right: A faithful, sincere friend. [The adjectives are coördinate in thought; both modify "friend."]

Right: A big gray cat. [The adjectives are not coördinate in thought; "gray" modifies "cat," but "big" modifies "gray cat."]

Series of the form
a, b, and c

223. In a series of the form a, b, and c, a comma should precede the conjunction. The practice of omitting the comma before the conjunction is illogical and is not favored by the best modern usage.

Objectionable: There were blue, green and red flags.

[The punctuation here couples "green" and "red" and makes them appear to be set apart, as a pair, from "blue"; whereas the intention is to make all three adjectives equally distinct.]

Right: There were blue, green, and red flags.

For other examples, see the text of Rules 3, 15, 31, 47, 122, 144 b, 145, 165, 174, 230.

Restrictive and non-restrictive
modifiers

224. Often a phrase or clause, though grammatically, a modifier of a preceding substantive, is felt to be not an adjunct to that substantive, but rather a statement added to the main assertion of the sentence. Such phrases and clauses are called non-restrictive. They should always be set off by commas.

- A. Non-restrictive phrase correctly punctuated: Our national Capitol, situated in Washington, is a magnificent building.
- B. Non-restrictive relative clause correctly punctuated: Washington Irving, whose personality was genial and charming, became very popular in England.

When a phrase or clause modifying a preceding substantive is felt to be essentially a modifier restricting that substantive, it is called a restrictive phrase or clause. Such phrases and clauses should not be set off by commas.

- C. Restrictive phrase — commas correctly omitted: The house situated on the northeast corner of the square is the one you are seeking.
- D. Restrictive relative clause — commas correctly omitted: Every man who holds such an opinion is by tendency a criminal.

NOTE. — To determine whether a given phrase or clause is restrictive or non-restrictive, the following test may be used: If the main assertion of the sentence has the same meaning when the phrase or clause is omitted as it has when the phrase or clause is present in the sentence, the phrase or clause is non-restrictive; if the omission of the phrase or clause changes the sense of the main assertion, the phrase or clause is restrictive. Thus, the sentence "Our national Capitol is a magnificent building" has the same purport as sentence A, above; the sentence "Washington Irving became very popular in England" has the same purport as sentence B, above. But "The house is the one you are seeking" has not the same purport as sentence C, above; nor has "Every man is by tendency a criminal" the same purport as sentence D, above.

Means of distinguishing restrictive from non-restrictive modifiers

(See Exercise LXXV.)

225. After an interjection a comma is often preferable to an exclamation point.

With interjections

Right: Oh, come; you'd better.

Right: But alas, this was not the case.

226. Expressions like he said preceding direct quotations in narrative, and such expressions preceding short

Before quotations

Unnecessary
commas

direct quotations in general, should be followed by a comma. For illustrations see the Right examples under Rules 195 and 242. (Cf. Rule 233.)

227. Guard against the use of commas where they are not necessary. As a rule, do not put a comma where no pause is made in reading.

Bad : In the park, is a beautiful fountain.

Right : In the park is a beautiful fountain.

Bad : An incubator, is the most useful thing, a poultry man can have.

Right : An incubator is the most useful thing a poultry man can have.

For other sentences in which commas are properly dispensed with, see the text of Rules 33 a, 44, 54, 56, 62, 65, 148.

Misuse
before a series

228. Do not put a comma, or any other mark of punctuation, before the first member of a series of sentence-elements, unless it would be required there, were there one element instead of a series.

Wrong : During my senior year I studied, Latin, Greek, and chemistry.

Right : During my senior year I studied Latin, Greek, and chemistry.

Wrong : It is valuable, (1) to the student, (2) to the statesman, and (3) to the merchant.

Right : It is valuable (1) to the student, (2) to the statesman, and (3) to the merchant.

For other examples, see the text of Rules 42, 43, 96, 116, 133, 137.

Misuse
before a substantive clause

229. Put no comma before a substantive clause introduced by that or how when the governing verb (such as said, thought, supposed) immediately or very closely precedes the clause.

Wrong : The boatswain said, that the wheel was damaged.

Right : The boatswain said that the wheel was damaged.

Wrong : I always supposed, that the foreman was to blame.

Right : I always supposed that the foreman was to blame.

Wrong : They told us, how they had escaped.

Right : They told us how they had escaped.

230. Clauses of a compound sentence that are not joined by conjunctions may be separated by commas when the clauses are short, have no commas within themselves, and are closely parallel in substance and form ; e.g., —

The "comma fault"

Permissible : The colonel grunted, the majors snorted, the captains swore.

Permissible : He befriended the stranger, he relieved the poor, he helped the fallen to rise.

Aside from cases of this kind, however, the use of a comma at the end of a grammatically complete assertion that is not joined to a following assertion by a conjunction is an inexcusable fault in writing. (See Exercise LXXVI.)

Bad : Neagle was assigned to act as the judge's body-guard, such a precaution was necessary in those days.

Right : Neagle was assigned to act as the judge's body-guard. Such a precaution was necessary in those days.

Bad : Our men had won so many games that they were over-confident, this was the cause of the recent defeat.

Right : Our men had won so many games that they were over-confident ; this was the cause of the recent defeat. [See Rule 231 a.]

The Semicolon (;)<sup>1</sup>

231. Use the semicolon —

(a) Between clauses of a compound sentence that are not joined by a conjunction.

Between clauses of a compound
sentence

Right : He did not go to Canada ; he went to Mexico.

<sup>1</sup> See Exercise LXXVII.

For other examples see the text of Rules 10, 20, 38, 42, 84, 88, 93, 138.

Caution

NOTE. — As a means of combining sentences into compound sentences, the semicolon may easily be abused. A series of sentences should not be grouped together in this way unless the compound sentence so formed has a distinct and readily-felt unity.

Before so,
therefore,
etc.

(b) Between clauses of a compound sentence that are joined by one of the conjunctive adverbs so, therefore, hence, however, nevertheless, moreover, accordingly, besides, also, thus, then, still, and otherwise. (See Exercise LXXVI.)

Wrong: I saw no reason for moving, therefore I stayed still.

Right: I saw no reason for moving; therefore I stayed still.

Wrong: He went below and lit the fuse, then he returned to the deck.

Right: He went below and lit the fuse; then he returned to the deck.

Conjunctive adverbs distinguished from simple conjunctions

NOTE. — Good usage makes a clear distinction, as regards punctuation, between conjunctive adverbs and simple coordinating conjunctions (e.g., and, but, or, for). A comma is ordinarily used (see Rule 221 f) between clauses of a compound sentence that are connected by a simple conjunction; but a comma should emphatically not be used between clauses connected by a conjunctive adverb. Compare the two following sentences:

Right: The president bowed, and Hughes began to speak.

Right: The president bowed; then Hughes began to speak.

Before and, but,
etc., in certain cases

(c) Between clauses of a compound sentence that are joined by a simple conjunction, when those clauses are somewhat long, or when a more decided pause than a comma would furnish is desirable. See, for example, the second sentence of the foregoing note, and also the text of the notes under Rules 14 and 88.

- (d) To separate two or more coördinate members of a simple or complex sentence when those members, or some of them, have commas within themselves. Between involved sentence-members

Right: He said that he had lent his neighbor an ax; that on the next day, needing the ax, he had gone to get it; and that his neighbor had denied borrowing it. [The three objects of "said" are separated not by commas, as ordinarily three objects of a verb should be, but by semicolons, because one of the objects has commas within itself.]

For other examples see the text of Rules 134, 135, and 137.

- (e) To separate any two members of a simple or complex sentence when, for any reason, a comma would not make the relation between them immediately clear. Instead of a comma, to prevent obscurity

Misleading: If I were a millionaire, I would have horses, and motors, and yachts, and the whole world should minister to my pleasure.

Clear: If I were a millionaire, I would have horses, and motors, and yachts; and the whole world should minister to my pleasure.

See also the sixth sentence in the text of Rule 140 and the first in the text of Rule 142.

- 232. Do not use a semicolon between two members of a simple or complex sentence except in accordance with Rule 231 d or 231 e; use a comma if any punctuation is required at such a place. Improper use in place of a comma

Wrong: If you get no thanks from a person you have favored; you have no respect for him.

Right: If you get no thanks from a person you have favored, you have no respect for him.

Wrong: He was black-eyed; dark complexioned; and altogether very handsome.

Right: He was black-eyed, dark-complexioned, and altogether very handsome.

The Colon (:)

A sign of introduction

233. The colon should be used after a word, phrase, or sentence constituting an introduction to something that follows, such as a list or an extended quotation. (See Exercise LXXVII.)

Right: There are three causes: poverty, injustice, and indolence.

Right: Burke said in 1765: [A long quotation follows.]

Right: The case was this: I wouldn't and he couldn't.

Right: He did it in the following way: First, he cut an ash bough, which he bent into a hoop. Then . . .

The Question Mark (?)

Direct, not indirect questions

234. Use the question mark after a direct question, but not after an indirect question.

Bad: He asked what caused the accident?

Right: He asked what caused the accident.

Right: He asked, "What caused the accident?"

In parentheses

235. The question mark within parentheses is properly used only in serious compositions, such as historical works. Its use as a notice of humor or irony is a puerility. (Cf. Rules 250 e and 292.)

Right: This event occurred in 411 B.C.(?)

Bad: After his polite (?) remarks, we have nothing more to say.

Right: After his polite remarks, we have nothing more to say.

The Dash (—)<sup>1</sup>

Interruptions

236. Use the dash —

(a) When a sentence is abruptly broken off before its completion.

Right: If the scythe is rusty—by the way, did you get that scythe at Pumphrey's?

<sup>1</sup> See Exercise LXXVII.

- (b) After a comma, to increase the separation slightly. Comma and dash Right: Only one thing was wanting, — a boat.

For other examples see the text of Rules 2 d, 123, 124, 267, 304, 340.

- (c) As a substitute for parenthesis marks. Parenthetic use

Right: I dressed — you may not believe this, but it is true — in ten minutes.

- (d) Before a word summarizing the preceding part of a sentence. With summarizing words

Right: If you go to bed early, get up early, never loiter, or trifle, always employ periods of enforced idleness in serious thought or instructive reading, — if you do all this, you will be derided by the Omicron Pi Chi fraternity.

For other examples see the text of Rule 167 and the note to Rule 16.

- (e) Before a repetition or modification having the effect of an afterthought. Before an expression having the effect of an afterthought Right: Oh yes, he was polite — polite as a Chesterfield — obsequious in fact.

See also the text of Rule 23.

- (f) After the word immediately preceding a sentence-member that is set apart on the page from the first part of the sentence. For illustration, see the text of Rules 4, 221, 231, 236, 240, 248, and 250, and the Right examples under Rule 213. When a sentence-member is set apart on the page

NOTE. — If another mark of punctuation precedes the sentence-member set apart, the dash may be dispensed with. See the text of Rule 14 and the Right examples under Rules 211 and 212.

237. Do not use dashes indiscriminately, where commas, periods, or other marks of punctuation belong. Indiscriminate use

Parenthesis Marks ( )

Relative position of other marks

238. When a sentence contains matter set off by parenthesis marks, a comma, a period, or other mark of punctuation belonging to the part before such matter, should be placed after the second parenthesis mark, not elsewhere.

Wrong: I will ask him by telephone, (assuming he has a telephone) and I think he will agree (though I may be mistaken.)

Wrong: I will ask him by telephone (assuming he has a telephone,) and I think he will agree, (though I may be mistaken).

Right: I will ask him by telephone (assuming he has a telephone), and I think he will agree (though I may be mistaken).

For other examples see the text of Rules 16 a, 16 b, 90 g.

Incorrect
use of commas
with parentheses

239. A comma should not be used with parenthesis marks unless it would be required were there no parenthetic matter.

Wrong: The sheriff gave him (as his oath required), the most effective help. [The sentence "The sheriff gave him the most effective help" requires no comma after "him."]

Right: The sheriff gave him (as his oath required) the most effective help.

For other examples see the text of Rules 27, 66, and 69.

Misuse in general

240. Do not use parenthesis marks to enclose matter that is not parenthetical. Do not use them —

Misuse for emphasis

(a) To emphasize a word; italicize (see Rule 284).

Bad: "The man (who) they thought was dead surprised them" is correct.

Right: "The man who they thought was dead surprised them" is correct.

Misuse
with words discussed

(b) To enclose a word about which something is said as a word. Such words should be italicized (see Rule 284).

Wrong: (Party) is often incorrectly used for (person).

Right: Party is often incorrectly used for person.

- (c) To indicate the title of a book ; italicize (see Rule 284). Misuse with literary titles Wrong: Garland's story (Among the Corn Rows) is pathetic.

Right: Garland's story Among the Corn Rows is pathetic.

- (d) To enclose a letter, number, or symbol, unless it is used parenthetically. Misuse with letters and symbols Bad: A (v) shaped plate of steel.

Right: A v-shaped plate of steel.

Right: It is marked with the figure 2.

- (e) To cancel a word or passage (see Rule 216). Misuse for canceling

Brackets [ ]

241. Square brackets, [ ], are used to enclose a word or words interpolated in a quotation by the person quoting. Words enclosed in parenthesis marks, ( ), occurring in a quotation, are understood to belong to the quotation ; words enclosed in brackets, [ ], are understood to be interpolated by the writer quoting. Words interpolated in a quotation Right: "I would gladly," writes Landor, "see our language enriched . . . At present [in the eighteenth century] we recur to the Latin and reject the Saxon . . ."

Quotation Marks (" ")

242. Use quotation marks to enclose a direct quotation, but not to enclose an indirect quotation. For direct, not indirect quotations

Wrong: He said "that he was grieved."

Right: He said that he was grieved.

Right: He said, "I am grieved."

243. Do not fail to put quotation marks at the beginning and the end of every quotation. (See Exercise LXXIX.) Omission

Misuse
within a quotation

244. Do not punctuate sentences of a single speech as if they were separate speeches. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

Bad : She said, "Is this the truth?" "Then I must tell my husband." "He ought to know."

Right : She said, "Is this the truth? Then I must tell my husband. He ought to know."

Relative
position of question or exclamation
mark

245. When a quotation mark and a question or exclamation mark both follow the same word, —

(a) The question or exclamation mark should stand first if it applies to the quotation and not to the sentence containing the quotation.

Wrong : He said, "Are you hurt"?

Right : He said, "Are you hurt?"

(b) The quotation mark should stand first if the other mark applies, not to the quotation, but to the sentence containing the quotation.

Wrong : Did the letter say, "Come to-night at ten?"

Right : Did the letter say, "Come to-night at ten"?

(c) In either case no comma or period should be used in addition to the quotation mark and the question or exclamation mark.

Wrong : He cried "Fire!", and began to run.

Right : He cried "Fire!" and began to run.

Wrong : Did he say "I object."?

Right : Did he say, "I object"?

(See Exercise LXXIX.)

Quotation
within a quotation

246. A quotation within a quotation is marked by single quotation marks ; one within that by double marks.

Wrong : I repeated those lines of Tennyson,

"Thou shalt hear the "Never, never," whispered by the phantom years,

And a song from out the distance in the ringing of thine ears,"

until I knew them by heart.

Right: I repeated those lines of Tennyson,

"Thou shalt hear the 'Never, never,' whispered by the phantom years,
And a song from out the distance in the ringing of thine ears,"

until I knew them by heart.

Wrong: "Then," continued Brightman, "the captain
shouted, "Cast off!"

Right: "Then," continued Brightman, "the captain
shouted, 'Cast off!'"

247. When a quotation consists of several paragraphs (see Rule 212), quotation marks should be placed at the beginning of each paragraph, and at the end of the quotation; not elsewhere, except in accordance with Rule 261 a. For illustration, see the example under Rule 212.

Quotations of several paragraphs

248. Quotation marks may sometimes be used to mark a technical term presumably unfamiliar to the reader. (See, for example, the text of Rule 256 and the Right example under Element in the Glossary.) But —

With unfamiliar technical terms

NOTE. — No such marking is needed for technical or quasi-technical terms that are perfectly familiar to the reader. None is ordinarily needed, for instance, for wire-puller, boss, off-year, touch-down, kick-off, haze, corner the market.

Familiar
terms

249. Quotation marks may sometimes be used to indicate apology for slang or nicknames. But note:

Slang and nick-
names

(a) No such apology is needed for hard hit, brace up, rough it, to duck, to oust, to loaf, to cut a figure, the whys and wherefores, the forties, willy nilly, day dreams, proxy, bugbear, humbug, hoax, tomfoolery, bamboozle, whoop, ninny, milk-sop, skinflint, parson, and other good English expressions vulgarly supposed to be slang.

Good English mistaken
for slang

(b) In a humorous or colloquial context such apology for slang or for nicknames is artistically inconsistent with the style, and obstructs the legitimate purpose of the style.

Apology out of place

Inartistic: When radicalism "threw up its hat" for "Rob" Rowland, "rough-house," and reform, conservatism "took to the tall timbers." "Rob," though "cock of the walk" in the capital, has been "sassed" by his home paper, which attributes his influence to hypnotism and "hot air."

Improved in effectiveness: When radicalism threw up its hat for Rob Rowland, rough-house, and reform, conservatism took to the tall timbers. Rob, though cock of the walk in the capital, has been sassed by his home paper, which attributes his influence to hypnotism and hot air.

Nicknames that are virtually proper
names

(c) The nicknames of persons in real life or in fiction who are known by nicknames altogether, or as commonly as by their proper names, should not be enclosed in quotation marks.

Wrong: "Tom" Johnson, "Bathhouse John," "Teddy" Roosevelt, "Jim" Corbett, "Prexy" Harper, and the Honorable "Hinkey Dink" were present.

Right: Tom Johnson, Bathhouse John, Teddy Roosevelt, Jim Corbett, Prexy Harper, and the Honorable Hinkey Dink were present.

Wrong: Two women, the "Duchess" and "Mother" Shipton, and two men, Mr. Oakhurst and "Uncle Billy," were ordered to leave town.

Right: Two women, the Duchess and Mother Shipton, and two men, Mr. Oakhurst and Uncle Billy, were ordered to leave town.

Wrong: As I was "bucking" for "Perky's" "quiz," I was interrupted by "Fatty" Holmes and "Smudge" Williams, who refused to "clear out." [See Rule b, above.]

Right: As I was bucking for Perky's quiz, I was interrupted by Fatty Holmes and Smudge Williams, who refused to clear out.

Sundry misuses:
With the title of a composition

250. Do not use quotation marks —

(a) To enclose the title at the head of a composition, unless the title is a quotation.

- (b) To enclose proper names, including names of animals. With proper names

Wrong: I expect to go to "Ober-Ammergau."

Right: I expect to go to Ober-Ammergau.

Wrong: "Thomas" and "Rover" were good friends.

Right: Thomas and Rover were good friends.

- (c) To enclose proverbial expressions that do not constitute grammatically and logically complete statements. With proverbs Wrong: It was "nipped in the bud."

Right: It was nipped in the bud.

Wrong: He seemed to be "as mad as a March hare."

Right: He seemed to be as mad as a March hare.

- (d) To enclose words coined extempore.

Wrong: The manning and "womaning" of the enterprise will be difficult.

Right: The manning and womaning of the enterprise will be difficult. With words coined extempore

Wrong: It is not bronchitis or peritonitis or any of the "itiseses."

Right: It is not bronchitis or peritonitis or any of the itises.

- (e) To serve the undignified and inartistic purpose of labeling your own humor or irony. (Cf. Rules 235 and 292.) For labeling humor

Bad: Such is the ardor of this "pious" Hotspur.

Right: Such is the ardor of this pious Hotspur.

Bad: Senator Platt's speech on the bill was a sort of "funeral oration."

Right: Senator Platt's speech on the bill was a sort of funeral oration.

- (f) For no reason at all.

Bad: If the Creator in his "power and munificence" is good to me, I shall gain "distinguished success."

Use without any reason

Right: If the Creator in his power and munificence is good to me, I shall gain distinguished success.

The Apostrophe (')

Possessive
case

251. In the possessive singular of regularly inflected nouns an apostrophe should (with the exception stated in Rule 252) precede the s; in the possessive plural of such nouns an apostrophe should follow the s.

Right: The boy's cap.

Right: The boys' caps.

Nouns ending in s

252. Do not form the possessive singular of a noun ending in s by putting an apostrophe before the s; put an apostrophe after the s, or add 's.

Wrong: Dicken's novels. Burn's poems.

Right: Dickens' novels, or Dickens's novels.

Burns' poems, or Burns's poems.

Right: Charles's horse. Mr. Jones's house.

Misuse
with its,
etc.

253. Never use an apostrophe with the possessive adjectives hers, its, ours, yours, theirs.

With contractions

254. In a contracted word an apostrophe should stand in the place of the omitted letter or letters, not elsewhere.

Wrong: Hav'nt, do'nt, does'nt, ca'nt, is'nt.

Right: Haven't, don't, doesn't, can't, isn't.

In forming
plurals

255. The plural of letters of the alphabet and of numerical symbols is formed by adding 's to the letter or symbol. The plural of a word considered as a word may also be formed in the same way. But the regular plural of a noun should never be formed by adding 's.

Right: His U's were like V's and his 2's like Z's.

Right: In your letter there are too many I's and also too many and's.

Wrong: The Powers's, the Jones's, the Waters's and the Rogers's sold piano's and folio's.

Right: The Powerses, the Joneses, the Waterses, and the Rogerses sold pianos and folios.

The Hyphen (-)

256. No simple rule can be given for determining whether a compound word should be hyphenated or written "solid." One must simply learn, from observation and from dictionaries, what is the correct practice in individual cases. Note that the following words should not be hyphenated: together, without, nevertheless, moreover, inasmuch, instead, childhood, farewell, wardrobe, chipmunk, nickname, surname, midnight, railroad, misprint, pronoun, semicolon, withstand, outstretch, rewrite, and the other words enumerated in Rule 164.

Compound words

257. Always hyphen to-day, to-night, to-morrow, good-bye.

To-day, to-morrow, etc.

258. In dividing a word at the end of a line (see Rules 263-266, below), place a hyphen after the first element of the word, and there only; never put a hyphen at the beginning of a line.

At the beginning of a line

Miscellaneous Rules

259. When such as is used to introduce an example or several examples, it should be preceded by a comma (see Rule 221 h), a comma and dash (see Rule 236 b), or a semicolon (see Rule 231 e), and should be followed by no mark of punctuation, unless a parenthetical expression is inserted between the such as and the words that it introduces.

Punctuation with such as

Right: I read many historical novels, such as Romola, Rienzi, and Quo Vadis.

See also the text of Rules 18, 144 b, 145, 146, 233.

260. In introducing an example or an explanation with one of the expressions namely, viz., e.g., that is, and i.e., apply the following rules:

Punctuation with namely, viz., etc.

(a) The expression should always be followed by a comma.

Wrong: I selected it for two reasons namely: because it was well made, and because it was inexpensive.

Right: I selected it for two reasons: namely, because it was well made, and because it was inexpensive.

See also the text of Rules 16 a, 106, and 136, and the note to Rule 3.

(b) When the expression introduces a sentence or a principal clause, the expression should be preceded by a period or a semicolon (see Rules 230, 231 a).

Right: There is a vital difference between them; i.e., the Greek is an artist, and the Roman is a statesman.
See also the text of Rules 111, 90 g.

(c) When the expression introduces a merely appositive member, or several such, the expression should be preceded by a semicolon (see Rule 231 e), by a comma and a dash (see Rule 236 b), or by a colon (see Rule 233).

Right: They arrested the man who was really responsible, — namely, the cashier.

Right: There are three parties: namely, Tories, Whigs, and Radicals.

See also the text of Rules 2 d, 106, 123, 124, 269.

NOTE. — When the expression and the words it introduces are enclosed in parentheses, the foregoing Rules b and c do not apply. See the text of Rules 99, 121, 136.

Quotations with said he interpolated:

Said he excluded

Marks after part preceding said he

261. When an expression like said he is interpolated within a quotation or placed after it, the following rules apply:

(a) The expression should not be included within the quotation marks at the beginning and the end of the quotation.

Wrong: "If that is true, he said, I am lost."

Right: "If that is true," he said, "I am lost."

(b) The quoted words preceding the expression should be followed by a question or exclamation mark if they form a complete interrogatory or exclamatory sentence ; otherwise by a comma ; never by a period or semicolon.

Wrong : " Will you help," he asked ?

Right : " Will you help ? " he asked.

Wrong : " I will help," he answered.

Right : " I will help," he answered.

Wrong : " I will help you ; " he said, " you deserve it."

Right : " I will help you," he said ; " you deserve it."

(c) If the quoted words preceding the expression form a complete sentence, a period should follow the expression, even if a question or exclamation mark follows the words preceding. Marks after said
he :
Period

Wrong : " Won't you come ? " she said, " we need you."

Right : " Won't you come ? " she said. " We need you."

(d) If the quoted words preceding the expression would be followed, but for the expression, by a semicolon, a semicolon should follow the expression. Semi-colon

Right : " He didn't go to Canada," the teller informed me ; " he went to Mexico."

(e) In every case in which a period or a semicolon is not required (according to Rules c and d, above) after the expression, a comma should follow the expression. Comma

Right : " I am," growled the assassin, " your doomsman."

(f) The expression should not be capitalized.

Said he not capitalized

Right : " Go to the treasury," said the king, " and help yourself."

(g) The part of the quotation following the expression should not be capitalized unless it is a new sentence. Capitalizing of part following
said he

Wrong : " Hammer on the window," advised the policeman, " Until he gets up."

Right : " Hammer on the window," advised the policeman, " until he gets up."

See also the Right examples under Rules d, e, and f.

(See Exercise LXXIX.)

Marks of punctuation at the beginning of lines

262. Never put a period, a comma, a semicolon, a colon, an exclamation point, or a question mark at the beginning of a line; put it instead at the end of the preceding line.

Syllabication

263. In dividing a word at the end of a line, make the separation between syllables, not elsewhere.

Rules for syllabi-
cation:

There is no uniform principle for determining just what are the several syllables of any given word; one must rely largely on learning, by observation and by reference to dictionaries, what is the correct syllabication in individual cases. Nevertheless, a good many errors may be avoided by observing the following simple rules:

Follow
pronunciation

(a) Do not set apart from each other combinations of letters the separate pronunciation of which is impossible or unnatural.

A. Wrong: Exc-ursion; go-ndola; illustr-ate; instr-uction; pun-ctuation.

Right: Ex-cursion; gon-dola; illus-trate; in-struc-tion; punc-tuation.

B. Wrong: Prostr-ate; pri-nciple; abs-urd; fini-shing; sugge-stion.

Right: Pros-trate; prin-ciple; ab-surd; finish-ing; sugges-tion.

C. Wrong: Nat-ion; conclus-ion; invent-ion; introd-uction; abbr-eviat-ion.

Right: Na-tion; conclu-sion; inven-tion; intro-duc-tion; abbre-via-tion.

D. Wrong: Diffic-ult; tob-acco; exc-ept; univ-ersity; dislo-dgment.

Right: Diffi-cult; to-bacco; ex-cept; uni-versity; dislodg-ment.

(b) As a rule, divide between a prefix and the letter following it.

Prefixes

Wrong: Bet-ween; pref-ix; antec-edent; conf-ine; del-ight.

Right: Be-tween; pre-fix; ante-cedent; con-fine; de-light

(c) As a rule, divide between a suffix and the letter Suffixes preceding it. Divide, e.g., before -ing, -ly, -ment, -ed, (when it is pronounced as a separate syllable, as in delight-ed), -ish, -able, -er, -est.

Right: Lov-ing; love-ly; judg-ment; invit-ed; Jew-ish;
punish-able; strong-er; strong-est.

(d) As a rule, when a consonant is doubled, divide Doubled consonants between the two letters. This rule often takes precedence of Rule c above.

Right: rub-ber; ab-breviation; oc-casion; ad-dition;
af-finity; Rus-sian; expres-sion; omis-sion; commit-tee; ex-cel-lent; stop-ping; drop-ping; shipping; equip-ping.

(e) Never divide in the midst of th pronounced as in The di-graphs th,
ch, etc.,
not to be divided the or thin; sh as in push; ph as in phonograph; ng as in sing; gn as in sign; tch as in fetch; and gh pronounced as in rough, or silent. Never divide ck except in accordance with Rule f, below.

Wrong: cat-holic; ras-hness; disc-harge; diap-hragm;
gin-gham.

Right: cath-olic; rash-ness; dis-charge; dia-phragm;
ging-ham.

Wrong: consig-nment; wat-ching; doug-hty.

Right: consign-ment; watch-ing; dough-ty.

The divisions post-humous (see page 225), dis-habille (see page 225), Lap-ham, nightin-gale, distin-guish, sin-gle, sig-nature, and Leg-horn, form no exceptions to the foregoing rule, for in them th, sh, etc., are pronounced each as two distinct sounds.

(f) In dividing words like edible, possible, bridle, Final le
not to be set apart
trifle, beagle, crackle, twinkle, staple, entitle, do not set le apart by itself; always place with it the preceding consonant. (But see Rule 266.)

Right: edi-ble; possi-ble; bri-dle; tri-ble; bea-gle; crac-kle; etc.

NOTE. — To Rules b, c, and d, above, there are exceptions. For a statement of these, and for a comprehensive treatment of syllabication, the reader is referred to the Introduction of Webster's International Dictionary.

Mono-
syllables

264. Never divide a monosyllable.

Bad: Tho-ugh, stre-ngth.

A syllable of one letter

265. Do not divide a syllable of one letter from the rest of the word.

Wrong: Man-y, a-gainst, a-long, ston-y.

Awkward
and too frequent division

266. Dividing words at the end of lines should be avoided as much as possible. And such awkward divisions as the following should never be made:

Bad: eve-ry, ev-en, on-ly, eight-een.

Abbreviations

Generally objectionable

267. Abbreviations are in bad taste in literary compositions of any kind, including letters. A few abbreviations, — such as i.e., e.g., q.v., viz., etc., A.D., B.C., a.m., p.m., — are excepted from the rule, being commonly used in good literature. Use no abbreviations except those which you know are employed, not by the newspapers or the writers of commonplace business letters, but by recognized masters of English prose.

Bad: Last summer I worked for the Chandler Mfg. Co. in Casey, Ill. Casey is on the C. and E. I. R.R.

Right: Last summer I worked for the Chandler Manufacturing Company in Casey, Illinois. Casey is on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad.

268. Observe that many abbreviations that are proper when combined with other expressions are improper when standing alone. Thus :

Right : I came at ten p.m.

Vulgar : I came this p.m.

Right : He lives in room No. 12.

Bad : Let me know the No. of your room.

Right : My dear Dr. Hart.

Vulgar : My dear Dr.

Abbreviations right in some places ; wrong elsewhere

Observe also that many abbreviations (such as vol., ch., p., Co., ed.) that are permissible in footnotes, parenthetic citations, and similar places, are not permissible in formally constructed sentences.

269. Abbreviation of titles is, in general, inelegant and objectionable. Spell out Professor, President, Captain, General, Colonel, Reverend, etc. Some abbreviations are, however, always proper ; viz., (1) Mr., Mrs., Messrs., and Dr., when prefixed to names ; (2) Esq., and the initial abbreviations D.D., Ph.D., etc., when suffixed to names. (See Rule 268.)

Abbreviation of titles

The Representation of Numbers

270. Do not spell out (1) cardinal numbers designating dates, (2) cardinal numbers designating the pages or divisions (i.e., parts, chapters, paragraphs, sections, rules, etc.) of a book or a document, or (3) the street numbers of houses.

Dates, folios, etc., and house numbers

Wrong : On October thirteen, eighteen hundred and eighty-one, I was born at three hundred and sixty-two Adams Street. See page nine hundred and sixteen of our family Bible.

Right : On October 13, 1881, I was born at 362 Adams Street. See page 916 of our family Bible.

NOTE. — Ordinal numbers designating days of a month may be either spelled out or represented by figures.

114 THE REPRESENTATION OF NUMBERS

Right: The thirteenth of May fell on Friday.

Right: The 13th of May fell on Friday.

Ordinal numbers designating pages or divisions of a book or document are governed by Rule 272.

Sums of money

271. In designating a sum of money in connected discourse, apply the following rules:

The sign $ improper for sums less than a dollar

(a) Do not use the sign $ for sums less than one dollar.

Wrong: It costs $0.20.

Right: It costs twenty cents.

The expression .00 never to be used

(b) Do not write .00.

Wrong: He subscribed $342.00 to the fund.

Right: He subscribed $342 to the fund.

Fractional sums

(c) For a sum amounting to a number of dollars and a number of cents, always use the sign $ and figures.

Right: It costs $3.18.

Even sums: Frequent

(d) If several sums are mentioned within a short space, use figures for all, putting the sign $ before all numbers representing dollars.

Right: My room costs $3 a week and my board $4.50; my contribution to the church is 30 cents; my incidental expenses range from $9.35 to $12.50 a month.

Isolated: A sum in cents

(e) In case of an isolated mention of a sum in cents, spell out the number.

Right: The price is ninety cents.

A sum in dollars

(f) In case of an isolated mention of a sum in dollars without a fraction, spell out a number expressed in one or two words, such as three, sixteen, two hundred, six thousand, one million; for other numbers, such as 102, 350, 1130, 1,500,000, use the sign $ and figures.

Right: He contributed twenty thousand dollars.

Right: It sold for eighteen hundred dollars.

Right: His fortune amounts to $72,500.

272. In representing, in connected discourse, numbers other than those treated in Rules 270 and 271, apply the following rules :

Numbers
not treated in Rules
270, 271

(a) In case several numbers are mentioned in a short space, use figures for all. See for example the text of Rules 203–208, where numbers occur frequently and representation of them by words would inconvenience the reader.

Frequent
— figures

(b) If the numbers to be represented are not frequent, spell out numbers that may be expressed in one or two words, such as eighteen, ninety-seven, two hundred, eighteen hundred, twenty thousand, one million, fifty million; use figures for those that require three or more words, such as 108, 233, 1,250, 18,231, 1,500,230.

Numbers
not frequent

Wrong: The college is 25 miles from Columbus and has 900 students.

Right: The college is twenty-five miles from Columbus and has nine hundred students.

Wrong: In this city there are four hundred and thirty-four saloons to three hundred and eighty-five thousand, one hundred and ninety-two people.

Right: In this city there are 434 saloons to 385,192 people.

Wrong: He lives on 72d street.

Right: He lives on Seventy-second Street. [See Rules 277 and 308.]

273. From Rule 272 b it follows that a number representing a person's age or one designating an hour of the day should nearly always (see Rule 272 a) be spelled out.

Ages, and hours of the day

Right: At twelve o'clock all the children below eight years of age are sent home.

274. A sum of money or a number that is spelled out should not be repeated in parenthesized figures, except in legal or commercial letters and instruments. When such

Paren-
repetition
of
numbers

repetition is made, (a) a parenthesized sum should stand at the end of the expression that it repeats, not elsewhere ; and (b) a parenthesized number should stand immediately after the number that it repeats, not elsewhere.

Wrong : I enclose ($ 10) ten dollars. [a]

Wrong : I enclose ten ($ 10) dollars. [b]

Right : I enclose ten dollars ($ 10). [a]

Right : I enclose ten (10) dollars. [b]

Capitals

Proper
names

Days and months

Not seasons

North,
south, etc.

275. Capitalize proper nouns in general, including the names of the days of the week and the names of the months. But note :

(a) The words spring, summer, midsummer, autumn, fall, winter, and midwinter should not be capitalized.

(b) North, south, east, west, and their compounds (north-west, etc.) and derivatives (northern, etc.) should not be capitalized except when they designate divisions of the country.

Right : As we sailed north we saw a ship going west.

Right : The West is prosperous. — The people of the South are migrating westward. — The Northern delegates clashed with the Southern.

(See Exercise LXXVIII.)

Titles of persons

276. Titles of persons should be capitalized when they are used in connection with proper names. When used otherwise than in connection with proper names, titles of governmental officers of high rank should be capitalized ; other titles should not. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

Right : There go Professor Cox and Colonel Henry. —

A certain professor became a colonel in the volunteer army. — The President and the Postmaster-General sent for the postmaster of our town and the secretary of our society.

277. Capitalize club, company, society, college, high school, railroad, county, river, lake, park, street, or any other common noun, when it is made a component part of a proper name; not otherwise. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

Common-noun elements of proper names

Wrong: I went to that College one year.

Right: I went to that college one year.

Wrong: Do you mean Hamilton college?

Right: Do you mean Hamilton College?

278. Capitalize nouns and adjectives of language or race, such as German, Latin, Indian, etc. (See Exercise LXXVIII.)

Words of race and language

279. Capitalize the important words of literary titles.

Words in literary titles

Right: I read The Light that Failed and A Tale of Two Cities.

280. Capitalize the first word of a sentence. This rule applies in general to quoted sentences; but not to a quoted sentence from which words are omitted at the beginning, nor to a quoted sentence-element incorporated in an original sentence. (See Exercise LXXIX.)

At the beginning of a sentence or quotation

Wrong: The conductor cried, "hands off!"

Right: The conductor cried, "Hands off!"

Wrong: It seemed to be "Without form and void."

Right: It seemed to be "without form and void."

See also Rule 38, note, and the last sentence in the note to Rule 88.

281. Capitalize the first word of every line of poetry. See the Right examples under Rules 209-211.

At the beginning of lines of poetry

282. Do not capitalize a clause following a semicolon.

Misuse after a semicolon

Wrong: Send him to the library; His father wants to speak to him.

Right: Send him to the library; his father wants to speak to him.

Use without reason

283. Do not capitalize words which there is no reason for capitalizing, such as locomotive, forest, organ, rhetoric, mathematics, history, whooping cough, landlady, bulldog, electricity, citizen, flour mill, profession, gold mine, teachers' convention.

Italics

Representation in MS.

284. To italicize a word in a manuscript, draw one straight line below it.

Italics with titles of books, etc.

285. Italicize titles of literary, musical, and artistic works, and of periodicals. Do not italicize the author's name.

Right: Walter Scott's The Talisman, Rider Haggard's King Solomon's Mines, Talfourd's Ion, and the Atlantic Monthly furnished his principal amusement.

NOTE.—It is permissible to enclose titles in quotation marks instead of italicizing them; but the simpler and better approved practice is to italicize.

Titles beginning with the:
Single works

286. If the title of a single literary, musical, or artistic work begins with the, this word should not be omitted in writing the title, and it should be capitalized and italicized.

Wrong: Do you like Kipling's Man Who Was and Chaminade's Silver Ring?

Right: Do you like Kipling's The Man Who Was and Chaminade's The Silver Ring?

Wrong: I felt depressed after reading the House of Mirth.

Right: I felt depressed after reading The House of Mirth.

Periodicals

287. In writing the name of a newspaper or other periodical, however, a the limiting the noun of the title should not be capitalized or italicized even if it is part of the title; and the name of a city modifying adjectively the noun of the title should not be italicized.

Right: She found there some copies of the Pall Mall Gazette, the Evening Telegraph, the Century Magazine, the New York Evening Post, and the Madison (Wisconsin) Democrat.

288. Italicize names of ships.

Names of ships

Right: I cut the Hispaniola from her anchor.

289. When a word is spoken of as a word,—not used to represent the thing or idea that it ordinarily represents, and not quoted,—it should be italicized. When a word is spoken of as a quoted word, it should usually be inclosed in quotation marks and not italicized.

Italics
with words discussed

Right: The misuse of grand, awful, and nice is a common fault.

Right: In the expression “we, the people,” “people” is in apposition with “we.”

NOTE.—With words discussed, it is permissible to use quotation marks instead of italics, even when the words are not quoted; and it is sometimes necessary and advisable to do so. In this book, for example, quotation marks are used with incorrect expressions discussed, because this practice helps, in some cases, to distinguish the wrong phraseology from the right. But the better practice in general is to italicize.

290. Italicize unnaturalized foreign words introduced into an English context.

With foreign words

Right: He is a bona fide purchaser.

291. Avoid the habit of frequently italicizing words for emphasis; do not emphasize a word in this way unless there is some especially good reason,—as, for instance, the fact that obscurity would result from lack of emphasis.

For emphasis

Bad: The curse of this age is commercialism coupled with hypocrisy.

Right: The curse of this age is commercialism coupled with hypocrisy.

For examples of necessary emphasis by italics, see Rules 2 e and 289.

Improper use for marking humor

292. Do not italicize for the purpose of calling attention to your humor or irony; this practice is undignified and inartistic. (Cf. Rules 235 and 250 e.)

Bad: The villain in the play was charming.

Right: The villain in the play was charming.

III. ANALYTICAL OUTLINES

Form of Titles

293. In an analytical outline, make all the titles, as far as possible, in the form of nouns, with or without modifiers. E.g., write "Rapidity of Movement" rather than "Moves Rapidly."

Nouns,
not verbs

Numbering and Arrangement of Titles

294. Number and indent the titles of an outline according to the following method :

THE GOVERNMENT OF SWITZERLAND

- I. Introduction : Value to Americans of a knowledge of Swiss institutions. Specimen outline
- II. The legislative department.
  1. General plan.
  2. The National Council.
    - a. Apportionment.
    - b. Elections.
  3. The Council of States.
  4. Powers of the legislature.
- III. The executive department.
  1. General plan.
  2. Organization in detail.
  3. Executive powers. — Comparison of Swiss and American executives.
- IV. The judicial department : the constitutional court.

Irregular alignment

295. Place coördinate titles at the same distance from the left-hand margin.

The Terms "Introduction," "Conclusion," and "Body."

Misuse of Introduction
and
Conclusion

296. Do not entitle the first division Introduction nor the last Conclusion unless their material is distinct from the body.

Wrong outline for an account of a sleigh-ride :

- I. Introduction : the start.
- II. The journey out.
- III. Conclusion : the return.

Right :

- I. Introduction : winter in Dakota.
- II. The start.
- III. The journey out.
- IV. The return.
- V. Conclusion : comparison of sleighing and other sports.

Body or Discussion
not to be used

297. Do not use the title Body or Discussion; place the titles belonging to the body, or discussion, of an essay flush with the left-hand margin, as in the outline on page 121.

Over-minute Subdivision

Over-minute-ness

298. Do not indicate minute and unimportant divisions.

Bad :

- 1. Situation of building.
  - a. In Ames County.
  - b. On a hill.
  - c. Facing east.

Right :

- 1. Situation of building.

Certain Illogical Practices

299. Do not write as a subtitle what is logically a part of the governing title; join it to the governing title or else omit it.

Bad :

- I. Founding of the city.
  - 1. By Dionysius Jones.
- II. Its principal industry.
  - 1. Piano manufacturing.

Part of a title written like a subtitle

Right :

- I. Founding of the city.
- II. Principal industry, piano manufacturing.

Bad :

- I. Ancestors.
  - 1. Scotch.
- II. Birthplace.
  - 1. Farm in Indiana.

Right :

- I. Scotch ancestors.
- II. Birthplace : description of the Indiana farm.

See also titles I and IV in the outline on page 121.

300. Do not write as the first subtitle what is logically the second or third; write it as a memorandum after the governing title, or else insert the subtitles that should logically precede it.

Second or third subtitle written like first

Bad :

- I. Situation.
  - 1. Advantages.

Right :

- I. Situation : its advantages.

Also right :

- I. Situation.
  - 1. Geographical location.
  - 2. Advantages.

Bad :

- II. Attempts to destroy it.
  - 1. Why they failed.

Right :

- II. Attempts to destroy it.
  - 1. The first attempt.
  - 2. The attempt of 1901.
  - 3. Reason for the failure of all attempts.

See also title III, 3, of the outline on page 121.

Coördi-nate title written like a subtitle

301. Do not write as a subtitle what is logically coördinate with the preceding title.

Bad [The rule is violated in titles II, 1, and II, 1, a] :

- I. The departure.
- II. The arrival in the city.
  - 1. Journey to the store.
    - a.* Purchases.
- III. Return home.

Right :

- I. Departure.
- II. Arrival in the city.
- III. Journey to the store.
- IV. Purchases.
- V. Return.

Also right :

- I. Departure.
- II. Experiences in the city.
  - 1. Arrival.
  - 2. Journey to the store.
  - 3. Purchases.
- III. Return.

Subtitle
written like a coordinate
title

302. Do not place a subtitle coördinate with its governing title.

Bad [The rule is violated in title II] :

- I. Disadvantages of football.
  - 1. Physical harm.
  - 2. Distraction from studies.
- II. Encouragement of gambling.

Right :

- II. Disadvantages of football.
  - 1. Physical harm.
  - 2. Distraction from studies.
  - 3. Encouragement of gambling.

303. Do not write the title of the composition like the title of a division.

Main title written like subtitle

Bad :

- I. Shipbuilding in Maine.
  - 1. Introduction.
  - 2. Principal seats.
  - 3. Methods.
  - etc.

Right :

SHIPBUILDING IN MAINE

- I. Introduction.
- II. Principal seats.
- III. Methods.
- etc.

IV. LETTER WRITING

Letters in the First Person

The Heading

Address
date

304. The first member of a correct letter written in the first person is the heading, — i.e., a statement of the address of the writer and the date of writing. The address should precede the date.

Wrong :

June 4, 1904,
Groveport, Ohio.

Right :

Groveport, Ohio, June 4, 1904.

The address : Insufficient
address

305. The address in the heading should be such as would be sufficient for a postal direction.

Insufficient :

Chicago, Illinois.

Right :

212 State Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Street direction
before city

306. If the address contains a street direction, this should precede the name of the city.

Wrong :

Columbus, Ohio.
28 High Street.

Right :

28 High Street,
Columbus, Ohio.

House
numbers

307. A house number should be written in Arabic figures and should be preceded by no word or sign.

Wrong : Fifteen H Street.

Wrong : # 15 H Street.

Right : 15 H Street.

Numbers
of streets

308. Street numbers less than one hundred should be spelled out. (See Rule 272 b.)

Right : 285 Forty-second Street. [See Rule 277.]

- 309. In writing a street direction do not omit Street. Omission of Street

Wrong: 17 Main.

Right: 17 Main Street.

- 310. The date should consist of the name (not the number) of the month, the number of the day of the month, and the complete number of the year. The date: Complete-ness

Inelegant: 3/21/'06.

Right: March 21, 1906.

- 311. All the numbers in the date should be written in Arabic figures, not represented by words. (See Rule 270. But cf. Rule 338.) Figures, not words Wrong: March the twenty-first, nineteen hundred and six.

Right: March 21, 1906.

- 312. The number of the day should not be followed by st, nd, rd, d, or th. St, nd, etc., not to be used

Undesirable: March 21st, 1906.

Right: March 21, 1906.

- 313. Do not use any abbreviations in the heading. It is permissible to waive this rule in business letters, but it is more dignified and decorous to observe it invariably. Abbreviations not to be used

Undesirable: Norton, Mass., Jan. 3, 1906.

Right: Norton, Massachusetts,
January 3, 1906.

- 314. The entire heading, if short, may be written on one line. If two lines are necessary, the date should be written alone on a separate line. If three are necessary, the street direction should stand on the first line, the name of the city and state on the second, and the date on the third. Grouping of the heading into lines

128      LETTERS IN THE FIRST PERSON

Right :	Fayette, Ohio, May 21, 1903.
Wrong :	21 North Street, Lima, Ohio, June 1, 1904.
Right :	21 North Street, Lima, Ohio, June 1, 1904.
Right :	5051 Madison Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, August 27, 1901.

Position
of the heading

315. The heading should be written at the beginning of the letter at the right side of the page. (See the letters on page 135.)

Separation or repetition
of members

316. Do not write a part of the heading (see Rule 304) at the beginning of the letter and a part at the close; and do not repeat the heading or a part of it at the close when it has been written at the beginning.

Bad :

Asheville, N. C., May 1, 1907.
Dear John,
* * *
Yours sincerely,
Robert Graves,
20 Charlotte St.

Bad :

Asheville, N. C., May 1, 1907.
Dear John,
* * *
Yours sincerely,
Robert Graves.
20 Charlotte St.,
Asheville, N. C.

Right:

20 Charlotte Street,
Asheville, North Carolina,
May 1, 1907.

Dear John,

* * *

Yours sincerely,
Robert Graves.

The Salutation

317. The following are proper salutations for business letters: Business letters

My dear Sir :
Gentlemen :

My dear Madam :
Ladies :

NOTE. — Dear Sir and Dear Madam may be used where familiarity of address is proper ; they are less ceremonious than My dear Sir and My dear Madam. In letters purporting to come from more than one person (e.g., a letter signed "D. C. Heath and Company") the my is, of course, necessarily omitted in any case.

318. Never use the abbreviation Messrs. as a salutation. (See Messrs. in the glossary.) Misuse of Messrs.

Bad :

D. C. Heath & Co.,
Boston.

Messrs. —

Right :

Messrs. D. C. Heath and Company,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Gentlemen :

319. The following are proper salutations for letters of friendship : Letters of friendship

My dear Sir :

My dear Madam :

My dear Mr. Smith,

My dear Miss Jones,

My dear John,

My dear Susan,

NOTE. — The foregoing salutations with My omitted may be used where familiarity of address is proper ; salutations without My are less ceremonious than those with My.

Vulgar
saluta-
tions

320. The salutations "Dear Friend," "My dear Friend," and "Friend John" are not in reputable use avoid them.

A name for a salutation

321. Never use a name alone as a salutation.

Bad :

Melmore, O., Sept. 3, '07.

Mr. Percy Clapp:—

Please inform me . . .

Right:

Melmore, Ohio, September 3, 1907.

My dear Mr. Clapp,

Will you please inform me . . .

Abbreviations not to be used

322. In the salutation never use any abbreviation, except Mr., Mrs., and Dr. (See Rule 269.)

Bad : My dear Prof. Walker.

Right: My dear Professor Walker.

Bad : Dear Capt. Ayer.

Right: Dear Captain Ayer.

Punctua-
tion

323. The salutation should be followed by a colon if the letter is formal ; by a comma if the letter is more or less informal. See the two letters on page 135.

Position
salutation

324. The salutation should be written flush with the left-hand margin. The body of the letter should begin on the line below, near the middle of the line. See the examples on page 135.

The Complimentary Close

Business
letters

325. The following are proper complimentary closes for business letters :

Yours truly,
Yours very truly,
Yours respectfully,

Letters of friendship

326. The following are proper complimentary closes for letters of friendship :

Yours very truly,
Yours sincerely,

327. Do not use any abbreviation, such as "yrs" or "respy" in the complimentary close; nor write "respectively" for respectfully; nor write "and oblige" in the place of the complimentary close. Vulgar closes

328. The complimentary close should be written on a separate line, should stand near the middle of the line, should begin with a capital, and should be followed by a comma. See the examples on page 135. Position and punctuation

329. All expressions introducing the complimentary close, such as "I am," "believe me," "good-bye," should occupy their regular positions in the body of the letter. Position of preceding words

Right:

Accept my congratulations upon your new appointment; and believe me

Yours sincerely,

Henry Cobb.

The Inside Address

330. The inside address — a statement of the name and address of the person written to — is an essential part of a complete letter, though it may be omitted from informal letters. Essential to a complete letter

331. The street direction may be omitted from the inside address. Omission of street direction permissible

Right:

The Tiffany Company,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

332. Do not write a name alone above the salutation. Name without address

Wrong:

Mr. Harvey Myers.

My dear Sir:

Right:

Mr. Harvey Myers,
Seattle, Washington.

My dear Sir:

Abbreviations not
to be used

333. In the inside address do not omit Mr. or whatever other title is proper; and use no abbreviations except Mr., Esq., Messrs., Mrs., Dr., and suffixed initial titles, like Ph.D. (See Rule 269.)

Lacking in courtesy and propriety:

West and Burchell, Chicago.

Gentlemen:

Right:

Messrs. West and Burchell,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

Lacking in courtesy and propriety:

Century Pub. Co., N. Y. City.

Gentlemen:

Right:

The Century Publishing Company,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

Permissible exceptions

NOTE 1. — By way of exception, the long names United States of America and District of Columbia may be abbreviated respectively to U. S. A. and D. C. It is permissible in business letters to abbreviate the names of States also; but the better practice is to spell out those names. Abbreviation of the short names Maine, Ohio, and Iowa is objectionable in any letter.

Use of the title Esq.

NOTE 2. — The title Esq. is a proper substitute for Mr. When Esq. follows a name, no title should precede the name.

Wrong: Mr. Ralph Williams Esq.

Right: Ralph Williams, Esq.

Position:
Commercial letters

letters

Literary Style

335. The following faults, characteristic of ill-educated writers and of writers without good taste, are to be especially avoided in letters: Certain vulgarisms:

(a) The omission of pronouns, articles, and prepositions. Ellipsis

Bad: Received your letter of the 6th ult. While very doubtful of the result, will try to carry out your instructions.

Right: I have received your letter of August 6. [See Rule 336, below.] Though I am very doubtful about the result, I will try to carry out your instructions.

Bad: We enclose check for three dollars.

Right: We enclose a check for three dollars.

Bad: Direct letter care Thomas Cook.

Right: Direct the letter in care of Thomas Cook.

Bad: Mr. H. P. Thurston, editor Jenksville Patriot.

Right: Mr. H. P. Thurston, editor of the Jenksville Patriot.

NOTE. — The omission of I is proper in diaries and in letters written in the style of a diary, — i.e., intended to present mere hasty memoranda jotted down without any attempt at completeness of form. Thus, Tennyson writes to his wife: "Slept at Spedding's where I found they expected me. Started this morning 11 a.m. Hay fever atrocious with irritation of railway, nearly drove me crazed, but could not complain, the other only occupant having a curiously split shoe for his better ease . . ." In such letters, clipped expressions harmonize with the context. In a letter, however, that is intended to be complete and regular in form, the omission of I and of other grammatically essential words is incongruous and in bad taste. (See Rule 337, below.)

(b) Writing "yours," "your favor," or "your esteemed favor" for your letter. (See Rule 17, note.) "Yours," "your favor"

(c) The use of the formula "yours of the 17th received," or "yours of the 17th at hand." Write a grammatically complete expression, such as "I have your letter of June 17." "Yours received"

"In reply would say"      (d) The use of the formula "in reply would say" or "will say." Write a grammatically complete expression, such as "In reply allow me to say."

"I would, will, or can say"      (e) The use of the formula "I would say," "I will say," or "I can say." Write "Allow me to say" or "I desire to say," or else omit any such introduction.

"Same"      (f) The use of the expression "same" or "the same." Use it or they. (See Same in the Glossary.)

Vulgar: Yours of the 3rd at hand, and in reply would say we are at present out of lamps desired but will send same as soon as possible.

Right: In reply to your letter of March 3, we beg leave to state that we have not at present the lamps you desire. We will send them as soon as possible.

"Please"      (g) The use of the expression "please" alone. Rather write "Will you please."

"Please find enclosed"      (h) The use of the formula "Please find enclosed." Write "I enclose."

"($10) ten dollars"      (i) The use of the formula "($10) ten dollars" or ten ($10) dollars." (See Rule 274.)

Name of city abbreviated      (j) The abbreviation of the name of a city; e.g., of Cincinnati to "Cin.," of Philadelphia to "Phil.," or of New York City to "N. Y. City."

Participial close      (k) Monotonously closing all letters with a sentence introduced by a participle, as "Hoping to hear soon . . ."
"and oblige"      "Thanking you again . . ."; or monotonously closing all letters of request with "and oblige."

The use of I      336. The rule often taught, that it is improper to begin the body of a letter with I, is nonsense; beginning with I is always permissible and often desirable.

Not to be avoided by mere ellipsis      337. The monotonously frequent use of I in letters is a common fault which it is well to guard against. But one should not, in order to avoid this fault, commit the worse fault of simply omitting I; as "Have not heard from you for a long time. Should think you ought to have written before this." The noticeably frequent use of I is nothing worse than an awkwardness; the ellipsis of I is a vulgarism. (See Rule 335 a, above.) As between the two, the awkwardness is preferable. To avoid the repetition of I, practice variety of sentence structure, not ellipsis.

FORMAL NOTES IN THE THIRD PERSON 135

A Correctly Written Business Letter

17 Lumber Exchange,
Minneapolis, Minnesota,
January 2, 1907.      Specimen
letters

Mr. Henry Coleman,
Chicago, Illinois.

My dear Sir:

I have your letter of December 29. Allow me to say in reply that the house is still for sale.

Yours truly,
Frank Shaw.

A Correctly Written Letter of Friendship

Murray Hill Hotel,
New York City,
September 20, 1907.

My dear Mr. Crawford,

The composition you inquire about is L. Pabst's Aria con Variazioni in D flat major. I forget who publishes it; but you can get it by sending to Schirmer's New York house.

Yours sincerely,
Edith Morris.

Mr. George Crawford, 1301 Beacon Street,
Boston, Massachusetts.

Formal Notes in the Third Person

338. Formal notes written in the third person should have no heading, no salutation, no complimentary close, no inside address, and no signature. They should be written consistently and solely in the third person; the writer should not refer to himself as I or to the addressee

Solely in third person

136 FORMAL NOTES IN THE THIRD PERSON

No abbreviations

as you. Except Mr., Mrs., Messrs., and Dr., no abbreviations whatever should be used; and numbers occurring in dates should — unlike those in ordinary letters — be spelled out. For information about other matters, the following examples will suffice:

Numbers spelled out

Right:

Mrs. Burton requests the pleasure of Miss Irwin's company at dinner on Friday, May the second, at seven o'clock.
935 Webster Street,
April the twenty-third.

Right:

Miss Irwin accepts with pleasure Mrs. Burton's invitation to dinner on May the second.
1720 Princeton Avenue,
April the twenty-fourth.

Bad:

500 Anderson Street,
Hennesy, Mich.,
Jan. 10, '07.

Mr. Matthews regrets that he will not be able to accept your invitation for Jan. 15. Severe illness will make it impossible for me to come.

Yours truly,
Hiram Matthews.

Right:

Mr. Matthews regrets that, on account of illness, he is unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. Eliot's invitation for January the fifteenth.
500 Anderson Street,
January the tenth.

Misuse of future tense

NOTE. — The future tense in the first sentence of the foregoing Bad letter illustrates a common error in letters of regret or acceptance.

Wrong: Mr. Smith will be pleased to accept . . . [The being pleased to accept is present, not future.]

Right: Mr. Smith accepts; [or] Mr. Smith is pleased to accept.

Wrong: . . . regrets that he will be unable to accept . . . [The inability to accept is present, not future.]

Right: . . . regrets that he is unable to accept . . .

Sundry Mechanical Directions

339. The ink used in letter writing should be of no Ink other color than black.

340. Letter-paper consisting of sheets so folded that each sheet is like a little book of four pages, is suitable for all letters, — commercial, professional, or social ; and for the letters of private individuals, as distinguished from those of public officials and those of business firms, it is, on the whole, preferable to writing-paper in flat sheets. The use of the latter kind is best confined to business or professional correspondence. Writing-paper that is ruled, or limp and flimsy in texture, or conspicuous because of unusual color, should be used for no letters whatever — except in case of emergency.

Writing-paper:

Four-page sheets

Flat sheets

341. The writing should not be crowded close to the top of any page, but should begin an inch or two below. For the sake of neat and attractive appearance, it is best to keep a blank margin at least half an inch wide at the left side of every page. Rules 165-177 and 183-187 should be observed in letters as well as in other manuscripts.

Margin at top

Legibility

342. When flat sheets of paper are used, it is usually best that only one side of each sheet be written on. If both sides are written on, the reader is slightly inconvenienced in holding and turning the sheets as he reads.

Order of pages:

Flat sheets

343. When four-page sheets are used, all four pages may be written on. The letter should be so written that a person reading the first page has at his left the fold, and at his right the coinciding edges opposite the fold. If the substance of the letter occupies less than two pages of the sheet, the first and third pages may be written on and the second be left blank. If the substance of the letter occupies more than two pages, it is best, both on the ground of good usage and on that of the reader's convenience, that the pages be written on in their natural order, — viz., 1, 2, 3, 4; not in the order 1, 3, 2, 4 or 1, 4, 2, 3. On the same grounds, it is best that the lines of writing on all the pages be at right angles to the fold, not parallel with the fold.

Four-page sheets

Folding and enclosing:

Four-page sheets

344. A letter written on a four-page sheet should be enclosed in an envelope of the same material and of such shape and size that the letter will fit into it when folded with one horizontal crease through the center. The letter should be so folded that the upper and the lower halves of page 1 face each other; or, in other words, so that the horizontal crease will appear as a groove on pages 1 and 3, and as a ridge on pages 2 and 4. The letter should be so placed in the envelope that the horizontal crease is at the bottom of the envelope, and the two coinciding halves of the vertical crease originally dividing the sheet are at the left hand of a person looking at the sealed side of the envelope.

Flat sheets of note size:
Envelope of note size

345. A letter written on flat sheets of paper of note size (approximately  $6 \times 8$  inches) may be enclosed —

(a) In an envelope into which it will fit when folded with one crease running through the center. In this case, the two halves of page 1 should be made to face each other; or, in other words, the crease should appear, to a person reading page 1, as a groove, not as a ridge. Place the letter in the envelope with the crease at the bottom, and with the half containing the heading next to the face, not the sealed side, of the envelope.

(b) In an envelope of commercial size (approximately  $3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$  inches). In this case, fold the letter into three sections, — a central section and two flaps. Correct folding may be accomplished by the following process: As the letter lies right side up on the table, raise the lower part and fold it upward over the middle part, making a horizontal crease about one third of the distance from the bottom to the top; next, raise the upper part and fold it downward, making a horizontal crease about one fourth of the distance from the top to the bottom. The creases should appear, to a person reading page 1, as grooves, not ridges. The letter so folded should be placed in the envelope with the two flaps next to the sealed side, not next to the face, of the envelope; with the smaller flap on top of the larger one; and with the outward edge of the smaller flap pointing downward. The foregoing directions apply to letters in which the lines of writing run parallel to the short sides of the paper. Letters in which the lines run parallel to the long sides should be folded into the same shape; but the part containing the salutation should form the smaller flap. Such a letter should be placed in the envelope with the flaps next to the sealed side, with the smaller flap on top of the larger one, and with the outward edge of the smaller flap pointing upward.

346. A letter written on flat sheets of paper of full commercial size (approximately  $8 \times 11$  inches) may be enclosed —

Flat sheets of full commercial size:

(a) In an envelope of commercial size (approximately  $3\frac{1}{2} \times 6\frac{1}{2}$  inches). In this case, correct folding may be accomplished by the following process: As the letter lies face up on the table, raise the lower part and fold it upward over the upper part with a horizontal crease running slightly below the center. Keeping the upper part lying next the table, and keeping the horizontal crease toward you, raise the right-hand part and fold it toward the left, making a vertical crease about one third of the distance from right to left. Finally, raise the left-hand part and fold it toward the right, making a vertical crease about one fourth of the distance from left to right. When page 1 is read, the horizontal crease and the two vertical creases that divide the upper half of the page should appear as grooves, and the two vertical creases that divide the lower half should appear as ridges. The letter, as folded, consists of a central section and two flaps. Place it in the envelope with the two flaps next to the sealed side, not next to the face, of the envelope; with the smaller flap on top of the larger one; and with the outward edge of the smaller flap pointing upward.

envelope

(b) In an envelope of official size (approximately  $10 \times 4$  inches). In this case, it should be folded and enclosed according to the method shown in Rule 345 b.

Square
envelope

(c) In an approximately square envelope, into which it will fit when folded with one horizontal and one vertical crease, both running through the center. In this case, make the horizontal fold first, laying the upper and the lower halves of page 1 face to face — or, in other words, making a crease that will appear as a groove in page 1; then fold with a vertical crease that will appear as a groove in the upper half of page 1, and as a ridge in the lower half. Place the letter in the envelope with the vertical crease at the bottom and the two coinciding halves of the horizontal crease at the right hand, with respect to a person looking at the sealed side of the envelope.

The fundamental principle underlying Rules
344-346

347. The foregoing rules in regard to the manner of folding letters and inserting them in envelopes are merely detailed applications of the simple rule of courtesy: Fold and enclose the letter in such a way that the receiver will be able, with the least possible effort, to get it right side up in his hand, ready to read. A few experiments will show that if any of the directions in Rules 344-346, above, are disregarded in the folding and enclosing of a letter, the addressee, on taking the letter from the envelope and unfolding it in the natural way, will find it with the first page turned from him or with the writing upside down.

The Envelope

348. In writing the address on an envelope, apply Rules 307, 308, 309, 333, and 335 a. The super-scription:

Bad :

Thos. Howe,
c/o Capt. Wm. Fisk, Wabasha,
Minn.

Addresssee's title

Right :

Punctua-
tion

349. It is permissible to write the address on an envelope without any marks of punctuation at the ends of lines. If such punctuation is employed, a period should be placed at the end of the last line and a comma at the end of each preceding line.

Right :

Professor Henry D. Lennington
1436 Putnam Avenue
Woonsocket, Rhode Island

Right :

Colonel Charles Kent,
The Southwick Hotel,
Kansas City, Missouri.

The postage stamp

350. The postage stamp should be attached in the upper right-hand corner. It should be right side up, and its edges should be parallel to the edges of the envelope. A postage stamp upside down or affixed in a haphazard fashion raises against the sender of the letter a suspicion of slovenliness.

V. A GLOSSARY

OF MISCELLANEOUS FAULTY EXPRESSIONS

A.D. Means in the year of the Lord. Should not, therefore, be appended to the name of a century. Should not be appended to a date self-evidently modern. When used, should precede the date and should not be preceded by a preposition.

Wrong: The sixth century A.D.

Right: The sixth century after Christ.

Right: Arminius died A.D. 21.

About. See At about.

Accept. See Except.

Affect. Means to influence; as "Trade would be seriously affected by a war." Is never used as a noun—always as a verb. Often confused with effect. Effect (verb) means to bring to pass; as "He effected a reconciliation." Effect (noun) means result; as "The drug had a fatal effect." (See Exercise LXX.)

After. Inaccurate: After having written.

Right: After writing.

Aggravate. Means to make worse; as "The shock aggravated his misery." Should not be used for vex or annoy.

All the. The use of "all the farther," "all the higher," "all the faster," or a similar expression is a crudity.

Crude: That was all the farther we went that day.

Right: That was all the distance we went that day; [or] That was as far as we went that day.

Alternative. Means choice between two things, or one of two things between which choice is possible; as "The alternative is difficult," "One alternative was to jump from the window; the other was to be burned to death." Should not be applied to one of more than two things.

Wrong: There is still a third alternative.

Right: Still a third course may be adopted.

And. Often incorrectly used instead of to.

Wrong: He said he was going up and clean out the attic.

Right: He said he was going up to clean out the attic.

And etc. Never put and before etc.

Wrong: Pillows, flags, posters, and etc.

Right: Pillows, flags, posters, etc.

Anent. The use of this synonym of about or concerning suggests affectation.

Any place, every place, no place, some place. Vulgarisms for anywhere, everywhere, nowhere, somewhere. (See Rule 4.)

Appreciate. Means to estimate justly or to value highly; as "I appreciate the service." Should not be modified by greatly or very much.

As (1). The frequent use of as as a causal conjunction is a mark of ill-educated writers. Where as occurs in this sense there should usually be no conjunction.

Bad: Excuse my short letter as I am buried in work just now.

Right: Excuse my short letter; I am buried in work just now.

Bad: There were no settlers left as they had all been massacred.

Right: There were no settlers left; they had all been massacred.

As (2). In negative statements and in questions implying a negative answer, good usage requires the correlatives so . . . as rather than the correlatives as . . . as.

Poor: The modern nations are not as artistic as the ancient nations were.

Right: The modern nations are not so artistic as the ancient nations were.

At about. Prefer about.

Inferior: He came at about three o'clock.

Right: He came about three o'clock.

Aught. Means anything. The name of the symbol 0 is naught, not ought.

Avail. Of no avail is properly used only with some form of be; elsewhere use to no avail.

Wrong: He tried, but of no avail.

Right: He tried, but to no avail.

Right: His attempt was of no avail.

✓ Awful. Means inspiring with awe; as "The awful presence of the king." Should not be used loosely. Say not "an awful mistake," but "a serious or disastrous mistake"; not "an awful blunder," but "a ludicrous blunder"; not "awful manners," but "uncivil or ill-bred manners"; not "awful treatment," but "discourteous or cruel treatment." Choose an adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

Badly. Should not be used for a great deal or very much.

Wrong : I want badly to see you.

Right : I want very much to see you.

Balance. Bad English when used in the sense of remainder. (Cf. Bank on, Take stock in, Endorse.)

Bad : One was an Italian ; the balance were Greeks.

Right : One was an Italian ; the rest were Greeks.

Bank on, take stock in. Objectionable slang in the sense of rely on, trust in, receive as trustworthy, confidently expect. (Cf. Balance and Endorse.)

Barn. Means a farm building used for storing grain or hay. Should not be used for stable.

Beg. When used in asking permission to do a thing, beg should govern a noun, — permission, leave, or some synonym of these words.

Incorrect : I beg to state. — I beg to differ. — I beg to be absent.

Right : I beg leave to state. — I beg leave to differ. — I beg permission to be absent.

Borrow. Not to be confused with lend.

Vulgar : He refused to borrow me his knife.

Right : He refused to lend me his knife.

Right : I wanted to borrow his knife from him.

Bring forth. Means give birth to. Should not usually be used for bring forward, offer, etc.

Bunch. A vulgarism for group or party.

But that, or but what. Incorrect after doubt.

Wrong : I had no doubt but what he would bite.

Right : I had no doubt that he would bite.

Calculate. A vulgarism for think, suppose, expect, or intend.

Can. Denotes power or ability. Should not be used to denote permission.

Wrong : Can students hand in their theses in manuscript?

Right : May students [or are students allowed to, or permitted to] hand in their theses in manuscript?

Can't seem. See Seem.

Cause. Complete such an expression as the cause was with a predicate noun or a noun clause. (See Rule 117 and Exercise XLII.)

Wrong: The cause of his failure was on account of his imprudence.

Right: The cause of his failure was his imprudence; [or] . . . was that he was imprudent.

Characteristic. Means a distinguishing quality; as "His chief characteristic is absent-mindedness." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: One characteristic of my daily life is climbing College Hill.

Right: One incident of my daily life is climbing College Hill.

Charge. Should be combined, when it means accuse, not with of, but with with.

Wrong: They charged him of many crimes.

Right: They charged him with many crimes.

Claim. Means to demand as due; as "I claim the reward." In-elegant for assert or maintain.

Climax. Means series of things each of which is in some respect stronger than the preceding; as "Then began a climax of misfortunes." Properly applied to the whole series, not to the culminating member.

Wrong: Our joy reached its climax when Father came.

Right: Our joy reached its culmination [or height, or acme] when Father came.

Coincidence. Means the occurrence of two events at the same time or in remarkable connection with each other; as "My forgetting my ticket and Bob's appearance just then with a ticket he didn't need, made a lucky coincidence." Should not be used to designate a single event.

Company. A vulgarism for companion, guest, escort, or the plurals of these words.

Complected. A vulgarism. (See Rule 5.)

Vulgar: A light-complected girl.

Right: A light-complexioned girl.

Conclude. Incorrect in the sense of arrive at a determination. Correct in the sense of arrive at an opinion or belief.

Right: I concluded that the current was weak.

Wrong: I concluded to strengthen the current.

Right: I finally decided to strengthen the current.

Contemplate. Should not be combined with a preposition.

Wrong: He contemplated on [or over] a trip to Alaska.

Right: He contemplated a trip to Alaska.

Contemptible. Means worthy of being despised; as "He is a contemptible sneak." Not to be confused with contemptuous, which means showing scorn; as "He made a contemptuous answer."

Contemptuous. See Contemptible.

Continual. Not synonymous with continuous, according to modern usage. Continual means occurring in close succession, frequently repeated; as "Continual hindrances discouraged us," "He coughs continually." Continuous means without cessation, continuing uninterrupted; as "Continuous opposition discouraged us," "He slept continuously for ten hours."

Continuous. See Continual.

Could of. See Of.

Couldn't seem. See Seem.

Crowd. Not to be used for party or company.

Cunning. Means artful, ingenious, or giving evidence of art or ingenuity; as "a cunning intriguer," "cunning workmanship." Should not be used for pretty or amusing.

Cute. Slang. Use pretty, vivacious, lively, amusing, dainty, piquant, engaging, or some other word in reputable use and of definite meaning.

Data, phenomena, strata. Plural, not singular forms. The singular forms are datum (rarely used), phenomenon, and stratum.

Date. Inelegant for engagement or appointment.

Deal (1). Should be combined with with, not with on or of, when the intended meaning is discuss.

Wrong: He deals on three subjects.

Wrong: He deals of three subjects.

Right: He deals with three subjects.

Deal (2). A vulgarism for transaction, agreement, or arrangement.

Demand. Means to claim or call for peremptorily. The object of this verb should be the thing claimed, never the person from whom the thing is claimed.

Wrong: Japan demanded Russia to leave Manchuria.

Right: Japan demanded that Russia leave Manchuria. [The object of "demanded" is the substantive clause "that . . . Manchuria."]

Depot. Inelegant as applied to a building for the accommodation of passengers. Say "station."

✓ Different. Should not be completed by a than clause, but always by a from phrase.

Wrong: The method is different than the one that formerly prevailed.

Right: The method is different from the one that formerly prevailed.

Diner, sleeper, smoker. Not in good use as meaning dining car, sleeping car, and smoking car.

Disinterested. Means without self-interest, unselfish; as "the judge's disinterested performance of his duty." Not to be confounded with uninterested.

Do away with. Hackneyed and inelegant. Say "abolish," "discontinue," or "eliminate."

Done away with. See Do away with.

Don't. A contraction of do not. Therefore ungrammatical when used with a subject in the third person singular. (See Rule 29.)

Wrong: He don't know.

Right: He doesn't know.

Right: I don't know, we don't know, you don't know, and they don't know.

Dove. Should not be used as the past tense of dive. Say "dived."

Down. A vulgarism when used as a verb. Say "subdue," "defeat," "obtain the advantage over," "get the best of." (See Rule 4.)

Due to. Should not be used unless the due modifies some noun.

Wrong: The forces were divided, due to a misunderstanding.

Right: The forces were divided through [or because of] a misunderstanding.

✓ Each other. Often misused for one another. Do not say "each other" unless each member of a group is represented as in a certain relation to every other member.

Absurd: Improvements in apparatus are rapidly following each other.

Right: Improvements in apparatus are rapidly following one another.

Right: The two brothers hated each other.

Right: They all agreed to stand by each other. [Each member of the party agreed to stand by every other member.]

Eating house, eating place. Vulgarisms for restaurant, dining room.

Effect. See Affect.

✓ Either, neither. Correctly used to designate one of two persons or things, not one of three or more.

Wrong: I asked Leahy, Mahoney, and McGinty, but neither of them was willing.

Right: I asked Leahy, Mahoney, and McGinty, but none of them was willing; [or] . . . no one of them was willing.

Elegant. Means excelling in the power to discriminate properly and select properly, or giving evidence of such excellence; as "an elegant gentleman," "elegant ornamentation." Should not be used loosely. Say not "an elegant view," but a "beautiful view"; not "an elegant game of football," but "an excellent or a masterly game"; not "an elegant march," but "a spirited or rousing march"; not "an elegant pie," but "a delicious pie." Choose an adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

Element. Means a component part; as "The elements of training are exercise, diet, and regularity." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: Next, the logs are "driven" down stream. Great danger besets the lumbermen in this element.

Right: Next, the logs are "driven" down stream. Great danger besets the lumbermen in this process.

Else. Inelegant: Somebody's else book.
Right: Somebody else's book.

Endorse or indorse. Bad English when used in the sense of approve. (Cf. the other commercial expressions "bank on," "take stock in," "balance," discussed in this Glossary.)

Bad: This statement is endorsed by eminent scientists.

Right: This statement is corroborated by eminent scientists.

Enough. A result complement limiting enough should have the form of an infinitive, not of a clause introduced by that or so that.

Wrong: It was near enough that I could touch it.

Right: It was near enough for me to touch it.

Wrong: There is humor enough so that the story isn't dull.

Right: There is humor enough to keep the story from being dull.

Enthuse. A vulgarism. The word is unknown to good usage. (See Rule 5.)

Vulgar: He doesn't enthuse me.

Right: He doesn't rouse any enthusiasm in me.

Vulgar: She never enthuses.

Right: She never becomes enthusiastic.

Etc. The use of etc. is incongruous in a context intended to be artistic. Use a definite term in place of etc. or else simply omit etc.

Wrong: She was more beautiful, witty, virtuous, etc., than any other lady.

Right: She was more beautiful, witty, virtuous, and loyal than any other lady.

Right: She was more beautiful, witty, and virtuous than any other lady.

In any context, avoid the vague use of etc.; use it only to dispense with useless repetition or to represent terms that are entirely obvious.

Every place. See Any place.

Every so often. A puerility for at regular periods or intervals.

Except (verb) means to exclude; as "He alone was excepted from the amnesty." Except (preposition) means with the exception (i.e., exclusion) of; as "All's lost except honor." Except is not to be confused with accept, which means to receive. (See Exercise LXIX.)

Expect. Should not be used for suppose.

Factor. Means a force or agent coöperating with other forces or agents to produce a certain result; as "The factors of success are industry and perseverance." Should not be used without intelligent regard to its meaning.

Bad: Being ducked in the lake is an inevitable factor in the freshman's experience.

Right: Being ducked in the lake is an inevitable part of the freshman's experience.

Falls, ways, woods. Plurals not singulars.

Wrong: Go a little ways down stream till you come to a falls.
Beside it is a woods.

Right: Go a little way down stream till you come to a fall.
Beside it is a wood.

Feature. May be used figuratively to mean noticeable quality or characteristic; as "The chief feature of the scenery is its ruggedness," "A feature of his style is its vivacity." Crude and incorrect when used to designate an event.

Bad: The principal feature of the day was a boat race.

Right: The principal occurrence of the day was a boat race.

Fine. A word of rather indefinite meaning. Avoid the habitual loose use of it; prefer a more definite word. Say not "a fine explanation," but "a lucid, or clear explanation"; not "fine tools for general use," but "tools well suited or adapted to general use"; not "a fine spring of water," but "a refreshing or delicious spring"; not "a fine toast-master," but "a witty or felicitous toast-master." Choose a word of definite meaning.

First-rate. May be used as an adjective but never as an adverb.

Right: It is a first-rate building.

Wrong: He plays tennis first-rate.

Right: He plays tennis very well; [or] He plays a first-rate game of tennis.

Firstly. A word unknown to good usage.

Wrong: Firstly . . . Secondly . . . Thirdly . . .

Right: First . . . Secondly . . . Thirdly . . .

Fix (1). Slang for plight, situation, or condition.

Fix (2). The verb fix means attach. Should not be used for repair, arrange, or prepare. The expression "fix up" used in one of these senses is particularly objectionable.

Former, latter. Properly used to designate one of two persons or things, not one of three or more. (Cf. Either, neither.) For designating one of three or more, say "first," "first-named," "first-mentioned," or "last," "last-named," "last-mentioned."

Frighten, scare. Vulgarisms when used intransitively.

Wrong: Does the horse frighten easily?

Right: Is the horse frightened easily?

Gentleman, lady. Terms properly used to designate persons of refined speech and manners, as distinguished from ill-bred or uncultivated people; the use of them to designate mere sex is a vulgarism.

Vulgar: Saleslady, business gentleman, lady stenographer. — There are lady cab-drivers in Paris. — There are more ladies than gentlemen who play the piano. — Cornell admits ladies, but Williams admits only gentlemen. — Ladies' cloak room.

Right: Saleswoman, business man, woman stenographer. — There are woman cab-drivers in Paris. — There are more women than men who play the piano. — Cornell admits women, but Williams admits only men. — Women's cloak room.

The use of man and woman need never be shunned; even where lady or gentleman may be used correctly, man or woman is equally polite, and is often preferable.

Right: Is your wife a Massachusetts woman? — You are the only woman I know who drives a motor. — Are you the man I met last spring in Denver?

Gentleman friend, lady friend. These terms, not in themselves objectionable, have, through the use that has been made of them, become ambiguous and vulgar. Prefer man friend (plural: man friends) or gentleman of one's acquaintance, woman friend (plural: woman friends) or lady of one's acquaintance.<sup>1</sup>

Get. A provincialism when used with an infinitive, as in the following sentence:

Wrong: I didn't get to go to the lecture.

Right: I wasn't able to go to the lecture; [or] I didn't get a chance to go to the lecture.

Get up. An inelegant expression loosely used for organize, institute, compose, prepare, arrange, print, bind, dress, decorate, or ornament. Choose the verb that clearly expresses what you mean.

Going on.

Tautological and vulgar: How old is he? Sixteen, going on seventeen.

Right: How old is he? Sixteen.

Got. Get means to secure; got should therefore not be used unless the intended meaning is secured, nor has got unless the intended meaning is has secured.

Wrong: Have you got a knife with you?

Right: Have you a knife with you?

Got up, gotten up. See Get up.

Gotten. Obsolescent. Say "got."

Undesirable: He has gotten his reward at last.

Right: He has got his reward at last.

Grand. Means on a large scale, imposing; as "a grand mountain range." Should not be used loosely. Say not "a grand day," but "a beautiful or brilliant day"; not "grand ice-boating," but "excellent or exhilarating ice-boating"; not "grand white snow," but "beautiful white snow"; not "a grand time," but "an entertaining or delightful time." Choose an adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

Grip. Should not be used to mean portmanteau or bag, or to mean cable-car.

Grip-sack. A provincialism for traveling bag or portmanteau.

Guess. Should not be used to express supposition, expectation, or intention. Say "think," "suppose," "expect," "mean," or "intend."

Had better, had best, had rather. Entirely grammatical and fully approved by good usage. Would better, would best, and would rather are not preferable. Had better is preferable to would better; had best and would best, had rather and would rather are equally good.

Correct but undesirable: You would better not stay long.

Right: You had better not stay long.

Right: They had best attempt no violence.

Right: I had rather go than stay.

Had have or had of. Often incorrectly used for had.

Bad: If he had have [or had of] tried, he would have succeeded.

Right: If he had tried, he would have succeeded.

Have (1). A vulgarism when used as in the following Wrong sentences:

Wrong: Ira Fote had a sheep die last week.

Right: One of Ira Fote's sheep died last week.

Wrong: When they saw the dead mother, each man had a tender feeling spring up in his heart.

Right: When they saw the dead mother, each felt a tender feeling spring up in his heart.

Have (2). A juvenile word for study.

Juvenile: Did you have German last year?

Right: Did you study German last year?

Have got. See Got.

Heap, heaps. Vulgarisms for very much, a great deal, a great many.

Hear to it. A vulgarism. Say "consent to it," or "allow it."

Help (1). A vulgarism for a servant, servants, or employees.

Help (2). Should not be followed by but when used in the sense of avoid; should be followed by a gerund.

Wrong: I can't help but regret.

Right: I can't help regretting.

Hired girl. A vulgarism for maid or servant.

Home. Should not be used as an adverb meaning at home; properly used as an adverb expressing motion.

Wrong: He is home.

Right: He is at home.

Right: He went home.

Honorable. See Reverend.

Hopes. Often misused for hope. Do not use the plural to designate one hope.

Wrong: I wrote in hopes of acceptance.

Right: I wrote in the hope of acceptance.

Wrong: In the hopes of seeing her, he remained behind.

Right: In the hope, etc.

Hung. Improper when used in reference to an execution. Say "hanged."

Wrong: He was found guilty and hung.

Right: He was found guilty and hanged.

Right: We hung the flag on the balcony.

Hustle. A vulgarism when used intransitively to mean hasten, hurry, or be energetic or industrious. Correctly used with a direct object.

Wrong: People were hustling about in confusion.

Right: People were hurrying about in confusion.

Right: The police hustled the loiterers from the hall.

i.e. Means that is; denotes, therefore, that what follows is equivalent to what precedes. Should not be used when what follows is not equivalent to what precedes, or when that is will not fit grammatically into the place of i.e.

Right: The act is treated as a capital crime, — i.e., a crime punishable by death. ["A crime punishable by death" is equivalent to "a capital crime"; and that is may be grammatically substituted for "i.e."]

Wrong: I like to read the Bible, i.e., some of the stories in the Old Testament. ["Some of the stories in the Old Testament" is not equivalent to "the Bible."]

Wrong: I like some parts of the Bible, i.e., the stories in the Old Testament. [That is can not be grammatically substituted for "i.e."]

Right: I like some parts of the Bible, — namely, [or viz.] the stories in the Old Testament.

Right: He had committed lese-majesty, — i.e., had given an affront to the Emperor. ["Had . . . Emperor" is equivalent to "had . . . majesty" and that is may properly be substituted for "i.e."]

If. Not to be used in prose as a synonym of whether.

Wrong: I don't know if I can.

Right: I don't know whether I can.

Ilk. An archaic adjective meaning same. In the expression of that ilk, as correctly used, ilk is an adjective modifying estate understood; "Sir George Urquhart of that ilk" means Sir George Urquhart of that same (estate), — i.e., Sir George Urquhart of Urquhart. The use of ilk as a noun meaning kind is a blunder.

Wrong: I'm not of her ilk, I'm glad to say.

Right: I'm not of her sort, I'm glad to say.

In. Generally incorrect when used to express motion. Say "into."

Wrong: He went in the bank.

Right: He went into the bank.

In back of. In front of is correct; "in back of" is a vulgarism. Say "behind."

In our midst. See Midst.

Individual. Should not be used indiscriminately for person. Properly used to mean individual person.

Right: He made a general address to the class, and also gave special advice to the individuals in the class.

Wrong: He is a tall, gaunt individual.

Right: He is a tall, gaunt fellow [or person, or man].

Indorse. See Endorse.

Indulge. Means (a) to treat with forbearance; as "Will you indulge me for a moment?"; or (b) to put no restraint upon oneself; as "He indulges in [i.e., puts no restraint upon himself in regard to] gambling." Indulge in is often misused for practice or engage in.

Bad: Practice in surveying is indulged in in the autumn.

Right: Practice in surveying is engaged in [or taken] in the autumn.

Inferior. See Superior.

Inside. Does not require of following. Say simply "inside."

Right: They were trapped inside the walls.

Inside of. A vulgarism for within, in time expressions.

Bad: It will disappear inside of a week.

Right: It will disappear within a week.

Kind, sort. Crude and incorrect: I don't like those kind [or those sort] of photographs.

Right: I don't like that kind [or that sort] of photographs.

Kind of, sort of (1). Should never be used to modify verbs or adjectives. Say "somewhat," "somehow," "for some reason," "rather," or "after a fashion."

Bad: People who kind of chill you . . .

Right: People who somehow chill you . . .

Bad: The man who does nothing but study, gets sort of dull.

Right: The man who does nothing but study, gets rather dull.

Bad: I kind of felt my way at first.

Right: I felt my way, after a fashion, at first.

Kind of, sort of (2). Should not be followed by a or an.

Inelegant: What kind of a house is it?

Right: What kind of house is it?

Inelegant: It is a sort of a castle.

Right: It is a sort of castle.

Lady, lady friend. See Gentleman and Gentleman friend.

Latter. See Former.

Lay. Often confounded with lie. Remember that lay is the causative of lie; i.e., to lay means to cause to lie. Remember the principal parts of each verb:

I lie	I lay	I have lain.
-------	-------	--------------

I lay	I laid	I have laid.
-------	--------	--------------

(See Exercises I, II.)

Leave go of. A puerility. Say "leave hold of" or "let go."

Childish: He left go of the rope.

Right: He left hold of the rope; [or] He let go the rope.

Less. A vulgarism for fewer.

Wrong: Less men were hurt this year than last.

Right: Fewer men were hurt this year than last.

Liab. Means (a) easily susceptible; as "It is liable to injury;" or (b) likely; as "It is liable to be misunderstood." But note: Liable is not properly used in the sense of likely except in designating an injurious or undesirable event which may befall a person or thing.

Wrong: We are liable to have a clear day to-morrow.

Right: We are likely, etc.

Like. A vulgarism when used to introduce a subject with a verb. Say "as" or "as if." Like is correct when followed by a substantive without a verb.

Vulgar: He acted like the rest did.

Right: He acted as the rest did.

Right: He acted like the rest.

Vulgar: I felt like I had done something generous.

Right: I felt as if I had done something generous.

Right: I felt like a philanthropist.

(See Exercise XXVI.)

Liked. Should not be compounded with would or should.

Bad: He would liked to have gone.

Right: He would have liked to go. [See Rule 53.]

Line. The following uses of line are characteristic of ill-educated writers and speakers:

(a) The loose use of line in the sense of kind or business, or in other senses for which there are precise words.

Bad: What line of work are you now doing?

Right: What kind of work are you now doing?

Bad: I am now engaged in the hardware line.

Right: I am now engaged in the hardware business.

(b) The use of line shown in the following Bad examples;

Bad: I like anything in the card line.

Right: I like any game of cards.

Bad: Was there anything in the refreshment line?

Right: Were there any refreshments?

Bad: He said a few things in the advice line.

Right: He gave me a little advice; [or] He said a few things by way of advice.

Bad: I'm not very good in the walking line.

Right: I'm not very good at walking.

(c) The use of "along the line of" or "in the line of" for in connection with, in regard to, about, on the subject of, in the nature of, by way of, in, of.

Bad: He was also famous along the line of literature.

Right: He was also famous in literature.

Bad: The dean said some things along the line of athletics.

Right: The dean said some things about athletics.

Bad: We are planning something in the line of a surprise.

Right: We are planning something by way of surprise.

(d) The use of "along this or that line" or "in this or that line," for in or on or in regard to this or that subject, in this or that respect, of this or that sort.

Bad: Let me tell you something along that line.

Right: Let me tell you something in connection with that subject.

Bad: If he is so weak in physics and chemistry, he needs some tutoring along those lines.

Right: If he is so weak in physics and chemistry, he needs some tutoring in those subjects.

Bad: I need some tacks. Have you anything along that line?

Right: I need some tacks. Have you anything of that sort?

Lines. A provincialism for reins.

Loan. Inelegant when used as a verb.

Inelegant: He loaned me a book.

Right: He lent me a book.

Right: The loan was a great assistance.

Locate. A vulgarism for settle. Correct when used transitively.

Bad: He located in Ohio.

Right: He settled in Ohio.

Right: He located his factory in Lima.

Lose out, win out. Slang, not proper except in connection with sports.

Lovely. Means lovable or inspiring love; as "a lovely character." Should not be used loosely. Say not "a lovely time," but "a pleasant or delightful time"; not "a lovely drive," but "an interesting or pleasant drive"; not "a lovely costume," but "a handsome, or dainty, or rich, or striking, or elegant costume." Choose the adjective that expresses your meaning definitely.

Mad. Means insane. Should not be used to mean angry.

May of. See Of.

Mean. Means lowly or base. Should not be used to mean cruel, vicious, unkind, or ill-tempered.

Messrs. The plural of Mr. Like Mr., Messrs. should never be used without a name or names following it. (See Rule 318.)

Vulgar: Messrs., will you come in? [To say this is like saying,

"Mister, will you come in?" or "Mrs., I have come."]

Right: Gentlemen, will you come in?

Right: Messrs. Zangwill and Barrie met the Messrs. McCarthy.

Midst. The expressions our midst, your midst, and their midst preceded by a preposition have been so much censured by critics and have gathered so many ludicrous associations, that, whether or not they are justifiable, they are best avoided. Instead of

"in our midst," say "in the midst of us" or "among us." Instead of "from our midst," say "from the midst of us" or "from among us." (Or else, substitute for midst some noun such as neighborhood, community, fellowship, etc.)

Might of. See Of.

Miss. Like Mr., Mrs., and Messrs., Miss, when used as a title, must always be followed by a name. (Cf. Messrs.)

Vulgar: My dear Miss:

Right: My dear Madam: [or] My dear Miss Smith,

Most. A puerility for almost. (See Rule 5.)

Mrs. The combination of Mrs. with a husband's title is a vulgarism. Mrs. may be followed only (1) by the woman's surname, (2) by her husband's Christian name (or initials) and surname, or (3) if the woman is a widow, by her own Christian name and surname; the husband's title, if stated at all, should be put in another part of the sentence.

Right: Mrs. Boughton. [1]

Right: Mrs. John C. Boughton. [2]

Right (for a widow): Mrs. Mary Dole. [3]

Vulgar: Mrs. Professor Yates, Mrs. Dr. Fairbanks, Mrs. President Hughes, Mrs. Bishop Ross, Mrs. Rev. Fisher, Mrs. Captain Johnson.

Right: Mrs. Richard E. Yates; Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of Dr. Fairbanks; Mrs. Louisa Hughes, widow of President Hughes; Mrs. Jeremiah Ross; Mrs. Noah Fisher, Mrs. C. V. Johnson.

Mushroom. See Toadstool.

Must of. See Of.

Mutual. Incorrect, according to modern usage, in the sense of shared in common; for this meaning the proper adjective is common.

Mutual, properly used, means reciprocal, interchanged.

Wrong: As we conversed, we found that we had several mutual friends in Portland. [The title of Dickens's novel Our Mutual Friend is a quotation from some ill-educated persons in the story: it therefore furnishes no good argument for the correctness of the expression "mutual friend"]

Right: As we conversed, we found that we had several common friends in Portland.

Wrong: The two men had a mutual interest in sculpture.

Right: . . . a common interest in sculpture.

Right: They practiced mutual forbearance and aid [i.e., each one helped and bore with the other]. — Their faces showed a mutual hatred [i.e., showed that each hated the other]. — Mutual friendship [i.e., friendship interchanged between two persons]. — Common friendship [i.e., friendship shared by two persons for a third].

Right: I'm not over-anxious.

Pair, set. Singular, not plural, forms.

Wrong: Two pair of gloves and three set of chisels.
Right: Two pairs of gloves and three sets of chisels.

Partake of. Means to take a part (of something) in common with others, to share with others; as "Good and evil alike partake of the air and the sunshine," "The whole delegation partook of his hospitality." The use of partake of as if it were synonymous with eat is a blunder and usually an affectation. For illustration see the second Bad example under Rule 21.

Party. Means a person or group of persons taking part (in some transaction). A vulgarism when used to mean simply person.

Right: The parties to the marriage were both young.

Vulgar: The party who wrote that article must have been a scholar.

Peek. A colloquialism for peep, look slyly; not proper in a formal context.

Per. Use per with Latin words, such as annum, diem, cent.; not, as a rule, with English words.

Inelegant: Three dollars per day; one suicide per week; seven robberies per month; $3200 per year; two deaths per thousand; thirteen cents per gallon.

Right: Three dollars a day [or per diem]; one suicide a week; seven robberies a month; $3200 a year [or per annum]; two deaths for every thousand; thirteen cents a gallon.

Per cent. An adverb-phrase, not a noun. The noun is percentage. (See Rule 4.)

Bad : Take it in Wisconsin, the old-fashioned method of logging is becoming extinct.

Right : In Wisconsin, for example, the old-fashioned method of logging is becoming extinct.

Take stock in. See Bank on.

Team. Means a couple or group of animals or persons ; as "a team of horses," "a team of athletes." A provincialism when applied to one animal or to a vehicle.

Wrong: Will you ride in my team?

Right: Will you ride in my buggy [or carriage, or wagon]?

Than, till, until. Often improperly used for when, as in the following Wrong sentences. (See Rule 117.)

Wrong: Scarcely had he mounted the wagon than the horse started.

Right: Scarcely had he mounted the wagon when the horse started.

Wrong: We had hardly got there and put things in order till Jenks came.

Right: We had hardly got there and put things in order when Jenks came.

That. Should not be used as an adverb. (Cf. This, and see Rule 4.)

Wrong: He went only that far.

Right: He went only so far.

Wrong: If it is that bad, we must retreat.

Right: If it is so bad [or so bad as that], we must retreat.

Wrong: He didn't want that much, did he?

Right: He didn't want so much as that, did he?

That there. See This here.

These here. See This here.

This. Should not be used as an adverb. (Cf. That, and see Rule 4.)

Wrong: This much is certain.

Right: Thus much is certain.

Wrong: Having come this far . . .

Right: Having come thus far [or as far as this] . . .

Wrong: The water hasn't ever before been this high.

Right: The water hasn't ever before been so high as this.

This here, these here, that there, those there. Gross vulgarisms. Say "this," "these," "that," or "those."

Those there. See This here.

Through. Inelegant when used as in the following sentence:

Wrong: He is through writing.

Right: He has finished writing; [or] He has done writing.

NOTE.—Never say "is finished" or "is done" in the sense above shown.

Till for when. See Than.

Toadstool. A synonym of mushroom. The common restriction of mushroom to edible fungi and of toadstool to poisonous ones is a misuse of the words.

Wrong: Is it a mushroom or a toadstool?

Right: Is it an edible mushroom or a poisonous mushroom? [or]
Is it an edible or a poisonous toadstool?

Too, very. Neither of these words should immediately precede a past participle; say "too much," "very much."

Wrong: He is too exhausted to speak.

Right: He is too much exhausted to speak.

Wrong: He felt very insulted.

Right: He felt very much insulted.

Topic. See Subject.

Transpire. Means to become known; as "In spite of their efforts at concealment, the secret transpired." It is both affected and incorrect to use the word in the sense of occur.

Treat. Should be followed, when used to mean discuss or speak of, by of, not by on or with.

Wrong: The author treats on two subjects.

Right: The author treats of two subjects.

Trend. Means direction; as "The rivers of this land have a southern trend." Should not be used without regard to its proper meaning.

Bad: The egg business is only incidental to the general trend of the store.

Right: The egg business is only incidental to the general business of the store.

Try and. Should not be used for try to.

Inelegant: I shall try and get a good position.

Right: I shall try to get a good position.

Ugly. Means repulsive to the eye. A provincialism when used to mean vicious, malicious, or ill-tempered.

Bad: The horse has an ugly temper.

Right: The horse has a vicious temper.

Bad: The conductor acted very ugly.

Right: The conductor acted very discourteously [or uncivilly].

Underhanded. Prefer underhand.

Right: He used underhand methods.

Until for when. See Than.

Up. Should not be appended to the verbs cripple, divide, end, finish, limber, open, polish, rest, scratch, settle, write.

Wrong: He opened up the box and divided the money up among the men.

Right: He opened the box and divided the money among the men.

Up to date. A vulgarism when used as an adjective; correctly used as an adverbial modifier.

Vulgar: His house is strictly up to date.

Right: His house is thoroughly modern.

Right: He brought the history up to date.

Very with past participles. See Too.

Vim, snap. Not in good literary use. Say "vigor," "energy," or "spirit."

Violin. Should not be used to mean instruction in violin playing.

Crude: He has just begun violin.

Right: He has just begun to take violin lessons.

Vocal, voice. Should not be used to mean instruction in vocal music.
(See Rule 4.)

Crude: Are you keeping on with your vocal?

Right: Are you keeping on with your singing lessons [or vocal practice]?

Crude: She is taking voice.

Right: She is taking singing lessons.

Voice. See Vocal.

Wait on. A vulgarism for wait for.

Wrong: If I'm not there, don't wait on me.

Right: If I'm not there, don't wait for me.

Want (1). Should not be limited by a clause as in the following sentence:

Wrong: I want you should be happy.

Right: I want you to be happy.

Want (2). "Want in," "want out," "want through," etc., are vulgarisms.

Vulgar: Do you want in?

Right: Do you want to come in?

Way (1). A puerility for away. (See Rule 5.)

Wrong: Way up the hill I saw a deer.

Right: Away up the hill I saw a deer.

Way (2). Should not be used adverbially without a preposition governing it.

Wrong: When he acts that way . . .

Right: When he acts in that way . . .

Wrong: How could a sane man act the way Beals did?

Right: How could a sane man act in the way in which Beals acted? [or, better] . . . act as Beals did?

Ways for way. See Falls.

Well. This word when used merely to mark a transition (e.g., "You know MacDonald, of course. Well, last night as he stepped into his motor. . .") is a colloquialism, not proper in a formal context.

When. Often improperly used for that in sentences like the following (see Rule 117):

Wrong: It was on a rainy day in April when I first saw Chicago.

Right: It was on a rainy day in April that I first saw Chicago.

["That I first saw Chicago" is a substantive clause in apposition to "it."] ]

- Where (1). Often misused for that as in the following sentence:
 Wrong: I see in this morning's paper where Cronin has been caught.
 Right: I see in this morning's paper that Cronin has been caught.
- Where (2). Do not use "where to" in the sense of whither; omit the to.
 Wrong: Where are you going to?
 Right: Where are you going?
- Which. Should not be used as a relative pronoun in referring to a person.
 Wrong: The people which do that are rascals.
 Right: The people that do that are rascals.
- While. Means (a) during the time in which, (b) though, or (c) whereas; as (a) "I played while he sang;" (b) "While this may be true, it does not content me;" (c) "Yours is in good condition, while mine is quite worn out." Should not be used loosely without regard to its meaning.
 Wrong: On one side was a grove, while on the other was a river.
 Right: On one side was a grove, on the other a river.
- Who. Should not, as a rule, be used in referring to animals; use which.
- Whose. The possessive case of who, not of which. Objectionable when it refers to inanimate things. Say "of which," unless the use of this expression makes the sentence extremely awkward—which is rarely the case.
 Crude: Soon we came to a swamp, on whose bank stood a hunter's cabin.
 Right: Soon we came to a swamp, on the bank of which stood a hunter's cabin.
- Win out. See Lose out.
- Wire. Rather vulgar in the sense of telegraph or telegram. (See Rule 4.)
- Woods for wood. See Falls.
- Would better, would best, would rather. Correct, but often used under a misapprehension. See Had better.
- Would have. Often incorrectly used in if clauses instead of had.
 Wrong: If he would have stood by us, we might have won.
 Right: If he had stood by us, we might have won.
- Would of. See Of.
- Write up. A vulgarism. Say "report," "relate," "describe," or simply "write."
- You was. A vulgarism. You, though it may designate one person, is grammatically plural, and its verb must always be plural. Say "you were." (See Exercise XVIII.)

APPENDIX B

A Grammatical Vocabulary explaining Grammatical and Other Technical Terms used in this Book

Absolute. A substantive with a modifier (usually a participle) attached to a predication but having no syntactic relation to any noun or verb in the predication is called an absolute substantive. An absolute substantive and its modifier are together called an absolute phrase. The italicized part of the following sentence is an absolute phrase: "The wind being favorable, they embarked." For other examples see Rules 132 a and 132 b.

Active voice. See Voice.

Adjective. A word used to modify or limit the meaning of a substantive; e.g., black, human, old, beautiful, metallic, dry.

Adjective clause. A clause used to modify a substantive in the manner of an adjective; e.g., "The rain that fell yesterday was a blessing" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "rain"); "The house where he used to live is vacant" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "house"); "There was once a city on the outskirts of which lay a pestilential morass" (the italicized clause modifies the noun "city"). Adjective clauses are often called relative clauses.

Adjunct. Modifiers and predicate substantives or predicate adjectives have the general name of adjuncts. A modifier is said to be an adjunct of the sentence-member it modifies; a predicate substantive or adjective is said to be an adjunct of the verb it completes.

Adverb. A word used to modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs; e.g., slowly, politely, accurately, very, too, then, up, down, out.

Adverbial clause. A clause used to modify an adjective, an adverb, or a verb; e.g., "He is greater than his father was" (the italicized clause modifies the adjective "greater"); "He walked faster than I did" (the italicized clause modifies the adverb "faster"); "I will come if my salary is paid when it is due" (the clause "if . . . paid" modifies the verb "will come"; the clause "when . . . due" modifies the verb "is paid").

Adverbial substantive. A substantive used to limit adverbially an adjective, an adverb, or a verb; e.g., "It is worth ten cents" ("ten cents" limits the adjective "worth"); "He walked two miles farther" ("two miles" limits the adverb "farther"); "He walked two miles" ("two miles" limits "walked" adverbially).

Antecedent. The word, as used in this book, means the substantive to which any pronoun refers. In the sentence "He who runs may read," "he" is the antecedent of "who." In the sentence "He picked up a stone and threw it," "stone" is the antecedent of "it."

Anticlimax. See Climax.

Appositive. A substantive attached to another substantive and denoting the same person or thing by a different name is called an appositive, or is said to be in apposition with the substantive modified. In the sentence "Edward the king is enjoying his favorite sport,—yachting," "king" is in apposition with "Edward," and "yachting" is in apposition with "sport."

Article. The word the is called the definite article; the word a or an is called the indefinite article.

Auxiliary. The verbs be, have, do, shall, will, may, can, must, and ought, with their inflectional forms (e.g., was, am, did, should, might, could, etc.) when they assist in forming the voices, modes, and tenses of other verbs, are called auxiliaries. The italicized words following are auxiliaries: "Have you gone?" "I did not see," "He has not been heard," "I should be grieved if it was broken."

Cardinal number. The words one, two, three, and the corresponding words for other numbers are cardinal numbers; the words first, second, third, etc., are ordinal numbers.

Case. The different forms that a substantive takes when it stands in different syntactic relations are called cases. The form or pair of forms (singular and plural) that a substantive takes when it is the subject of a finite verb is called the nominative case; the form or pair of forms that it takes when it modifies another substantive by indicating a possessor is called the possessive case; the form or pair of forms that it takes when it is the object of a verb or a preposition is called the objective case. The three cases of typical nouns and of the principal pronouns that are inflected are shown in the tables of declension under Substantive. It will be observed that in the nouns the nominative and objective cases are identical, but that in the pronouns they are (with the exception of the nominative and objective singular of it) distinct.

Causal conjunction. A conjunction that introduces a statement of cause or reason; e.g., for (coördinating); because and since (subordinating).

Clause. A group of words composed of a subject and a predicate and combined with another group of words likewise composed. In the sentence (a) "When I awake, I am still with thee," the two groups of words separated by the comma are clauses. A clause that plays the part of a constituent element (a subject, a predicate substantive, a modifier, etc.) in the clause with which it is combined is a dependent or subordinate clause (see Substantive clause, Adjective clause and Adverbial clause). A clause that does not form a constituent part of another, but makes an independent assertion, is a principal clause. The italicized groups of words in the following sentences are principal clauses: (b) "If the rope breaks, he is lost." (c) "The bell sounded, and every one rose." A principal clause on which a subordinate clause depends is called a governing clause; e.g., the principal clause in sentence b, above. Clauses that play the same part in a sentence, whether they are alike principal or alike dependent, are called coördinate clauses. See, e.g., the two principal clauses in sentence c, above; and the two dependent clauses in the following sentence: (d) "Though I am tired, and though my shoes pinch, I am going on."

Climax. A series of assertions or coördinate sentence-elements so arranged that each one is stronger or more impressive than the preceding one. See, e.g., the sentences marked Improved under Rule 89. A series of assertions or sentence-elements decreasing in strength or impressiveness is an anticlimax. See, e.g., the sentences marked Weak under Rule 89.

Common noun. A noun used to designate any member of a class; e.g., man, ruler, country, city, street, building. A noun used to distinguish an individual member of a class from other members is a proper noun; e.g., John, Anderson, Cæsar, Germany, Boston, Broadway, Acropolis. A proper name is an appellation of any kind (including proper nouns) used to distinguish an individual person or thing; e.g., Henry the Second (or Henry II.), Revolutionary War, First National Bank, Democratic Party, Second Presbyterian Church, Domesday Book, Forty-first Street, Ohio River, Niagara Falls, Edgar County, Calegonian Literary Society, Sumner High School, Columbia College, Morningside Park.

Comparative. See Comparison.

Comparison. When an adjective or an adverb is in the inflectional form that simply designates a quality or manner without indicating the degree in which that quality or manner is present, it is said to be in the positive degree; this form is, with a few exceptions, the shortest form the word can have, — e.g., sweet, strong, fast, hard. An adjective or an adverb is said to be in the comparative degree (1) when it is in the form which indicates that the quality or manner is present in a greater measure relatively to some standard (i.e., with a few exceptions, the form ending in er; as sweeter, stronger, faster, harder), or (2) when its positive form is combined with more (e.g., more sweet, more strong, more rapidly, more laboriously). An adjective or an adverb is in the superlative degree (1) when it is in the inflectional form ending in st (e.g., sweetest, strongest, most, best), or (2) when its positive form is combined with most (e.g., most sweet, most rapidly). The formation of the three degrees of an adjective or an adverb is called comparison.

Complex sentence. A sentence that contains a dependent clause. See, e.g., sentences a, b, and d under Clause.

Compound sentence. Two or more principal clauses connected by coördinating conjunctions; or two or more principal clauses not connected by conjunctions, but written with such punctuation and capitalization, or spoken with such slight pauses between them, as will indicate that they are combined. See, e.g., sentence c under Clause, and the following sentences: (a) "I came, I saw, I conquered." (b) "Must I obey you? must I crouch before you?"

Conditional. See Mode.

Conjunction. A word used to connect one word with another or one group with another; e.g., and, if, for. Conjunctions may be distinguished from prepositions (q.v.) by the following fact: Any conjunction can be used to connect one predication with another (e.g., "I opened the door when he rapped"), — an office which a preposition cannot perform; one of the two elements connected by a preposition must always be a substantive (e.g., "He fell into the cold water"). — Coördinating conjunctions are those which, when they join two predications, make those predications of equal rank, — neither dependent on the other; e.g., "I called and they came." The principal coördinating conjunctions are the simple conjunctions, and, but, or, nor, neither, and for; the correlative conjunctions, both . . . and, either . . . or, neither . . . nor; and the conjunctive adverbs, so, also, therefore, hence, however, nevertheless, moreover, accordingly, besides, thus, then, still, and yet. — Subordinating conjunctions are those which, when they join two predications make one of those predications subordinate to the other; e.g., "They came when I called." The principal subordinating conjunctions are if, though, whether, lest, unless, than, as, that, because, since, when, while, after, whereas, provided.

Conjunctive adverbs. Words that are used sometimes as adverbs and sometimes as conjunctives. See Conjunction.

Consonant. See Vowel.

Construction. The grammatical office performed by any word in a given sentence is called the construction of that word. For example, in the sentence "He walks fast," the construction of "he" is that of subject of "walks"; the construction of "walks" is that of predicate of "he"; the construction of "fast" is that of adverbial modifier of "walks."

Coördinate. Sentence-elements that are in the same construction within a sentence are coördinate. In the sentence "He and she talked long and earnestly and at last agreed," "he" and "she," "talked" and "agreed," "long" and "earnestly" are coördinate.

Coördinate clause. See Clause.

Coördinating conjunction. See Conjunction.

Copula. The verb to be, or any of its forms.

Correlative conjunctions. Conjunctions that are used in pairs; e.g., both . . . and, either . . . or, neither . . . nor, whether . . . or.

Declension. See Inflection.

Demonstrative adjectives. The words this and these, that and those, when they are used as adjectives; e.g., "this man." "those men."

Demonstrative pronouns. The words this and these, that and those when they are used as substantives; e.g., "That is not true," "What is this?"

Dependent clause. See Clause.

Direct address. Discourse in the second person (see Person); e.g., "Sir, I salute you." The expression a substantive used in direct address means a substantive that indicates to whom the discourse is addressed; e.g., "Sir" in the foregoing example.

Direct question. See Direct quotation.

Direct quotation (often called direct discourse). Quotation of discourse exactly as it was spoken or written; e.g., He said "I will help." Statement of the substance of quoted discourse without the use of the exact words is indirect quotation (or indirect discourse); e.g., He said that he would help. A question indirectly quoted is called an indirect question; e.g., He asked whether I would help. A question directly quoted, or not quoted but directly asked, is a direct question; e.g., Will you help?

Factitive adjective. An adjective, when it denotes a quality or state produced by the action of a verb, is called a factitive adjective; e.g., "It will make you strong."

Figure of speech. Certain devices of expression that may be used for making discourse interesting, effective, or beautiful are called figures of speech; others are not included under this term. Which of them are included cannot be stated briefly, for the application of the term is arbitrary, being based simply on custom and not on any common peculiarity of the devices included. Of the devices mentioned in this book, the following are figures of speech: simile, metaphor, climax, irony (see these words in this vocabulary), and the use of the historical present (technically called vision).

Finite. See Mode.

Future tense. See Tense.

Future-perfect tense. See Tense.

Gerund. A verb-form ending in ing is called a gerund when it is used as a noun. When such a form is used as an adjective, it is called a participle. In the sentence, "Coming close, he whispered," "coming" is used as an adjective modifying "he" and is therefore a participle. In the sentence "His coming was expected," "coming" is used as a noun, the subject of "was expected," and is therefore a gerund. A gerund may fulfill the principal offices of a noun. It may be the subject of a verb (e.g., "Fishing is tiresome"); the object of a verb (e.g., "I hate fishing"); the object of a preposition (e.g., "I have an aversion to fishing"); a predicate noun (e.g., "What I most detest is fishing"); an appositive (e.g., "That detestable amusement, fishing, I cannot endure"); or an absolute noun (e.g., "Fishing being my aversion, let us not fish").

Gerund phrase. See Phrase.

Govern. The relation between a verb and its object may be stated either by saying that the substantive is the object of the verb, or by saying that the verb governs the substantive. Likewise the relation between a preposition and its object may be stated by saying that the preposition governs the substantive. A clause, whether principal or subordinate, on which another clause depends, is said to govern the latter clause. In the sentence "She wept when she saw the injury that had been done," the clause "she wept" governs the clause "when she saw the injury," and the latter clause governs the clause "that had been done."

Grammar. The science that deals with (1) the classification of words with reference to the functions they perform in discourse (see Parts of speech); (2) the inflection of words (see Inflection); and (3) the relations that words bear to one another in discourse (see Syntax). Grammar is distinguished from rhetoric by the following fact: The statements comprising the science of grammar tell us how words may be inflected, used singly, and combined. The statements comprising the science of rhetoric tell us how words should be used and combined in order to make discourse clear and effective.

Indefinite pronoun. The words each, either, neither, some, any, many, few, all, both, one, none, aught, naught, somebody, something, somewhat, anybody, anything, everybody, everything, nobody, and nothing, when they are used as substantives, are called indefinite pronouns.

Indicative. The set of inflectional forms and of combinations with auxiliary verbs that a speaker uses when he conceives the action of a verb as a fact, is not the same as the set he uses when he conceives the action as doubtful. Compare, for example, the sentences "He is a coward" and "If he be a coward, he should be dismissed." The former set is called the indicative mode of a verb; the latter the subjunctive mode. The indicative and subjunctive forms of a typical verb are shown on pages 213 ff.

Indirect question. See Direct quotation.

Indirect quotation. See Direct quotation.

Infinitive. That inflectional form of a verb which may be combined with to (as in the sentences "To err is human," "I wish to go," "He refused to move," "It is impossible to see") is called an infinitive when it is used in one of the following ways: (1) in combination with to, as illustrated above; (2) in combination with an auxiliary verb (e.g., "I will go," "I can see"); (3) as the predicate of a substantive, the whole predication being the object of another verb (e.g., "It made me gasp," "I saw him smile"); (4) in one of the constructions of a substantive (e.g., "Do you dare go in?" in which "go" is the object of "dare"). The word to, when it is combined with an infinitive is not a preposition; it is merely a sort of prefix, serving no grammatical purpose except to show that the verb-form following is an infinitive. For this reason it is called the sign of the infinitive or the infinitive-sign. The infinitive-sign is not a necessary part of the infinitive. In the sentences "I cannot see," "I dare go," "Will you come?" "I heard the clock strike," "You had better speak," the words "see," "go," "come," "strike," and "speak" are infinitives, though the infinitive-sign does not accompany them. In mentioning an infinitive, the infinitive-sign may with equal correctness be put before the infinitive or be omitted; thus we may say either "The verbs to stand and to sit are intransitive," or "The verbs stand and sit are intransitive."—The use of infinitives in various substantive constructions is an important matter for the student to understand. An infinitive may be used (1) as the subject of a verb (e.g., "To read history is instructive"); (2) as the object of a verb (e.g., "I like to read history"); (3) as a predicate noun (e.g., "An instructive occupation is to read history"); (4) as an appositive (e.g., "It is instructive to read history"); (5) as an absolute noun (e.g., "To read history being so instructive, let us read it"); (6) as an adverbial noun (e.g., "History is instructive to read").

Infinitive-sign. See Infinitive.

Inflection. Change in the form of a word to show variation of meaning (as with inflections of number, comparison, and tense), or to show the relation of a word to another word (as with the inflections of case and person). The inflection of substantives is called declension, that of adjectives and adverbs comparison (q.v.), and that of verbs conjugation. The various forms that a word receives in inflection are its inflectional forms; e.g., love, lovest, loveth, loved, lovedst, and loving are the inflectional forms of the verb to love; man, man's, men, men's, are the inflectional forms of the noun man; see also the tables under Substantive and opposite Verb.

Intensive. The pronouns myself, thyself, himself, herself, itself, ourselves, yourselves, yourself, themselves, and oneself, when they are used in apposition, are called intensives (e.g., "I myself will do it," "He saw the bishop himself"). When they are used as the object of a verb and designate the same person or thing as the subject of that verb, they are called reflexives (e.g., "I hurt myself," "They benefit themselves").

Interjection. A word that expresses emotion and that has no syntactic relations with other words; e.g., oh, alas, ha, ah, hello, hurrah, huzza.

Interrogative pronoun. The words who, what, which, and whether (archaic), when they are used as substantives and in an interrogative sense (e.g., "Who are you?" "What do you want?" "Which do you choose?" "Whether of the twain is justified?"), are called interrogative pronouns. What and which, when they are used as adjectives and in an interrogative sense (e.g., "What song did you sing?" "Which book do you choose?"), are called interrogative adjectives.

Intransitive. See Transitive.

Irony. The suggestion of a thought or fact by an expression which, if taken literally, would convey the opposite of what is meant. "You are very kind," spoken in a certain tone to a bully who has been abusing the speaker, is irony. In the expression "arsenic, corrosive sublimate, prussic acid, and other mild and harmless drugs" the italicized words are ironical. — Sarcasm, as applied to discourse, is contemptuous, taunting, or intentionally irritating discourse. Sarcasm may or may not be ironical, and irony may or may not be sarcastic.

Limit. The object of a verb is said to limit the verb; the object of a preposition is said to limit the preposition; and any modifier is said to limit the element it modifies.

Metaphor. The denoting of a person or thing or the stating of a thought or fact by the use of an expression which, if taken literally, would designate not what is meant but something resembling it, is called metaphor, or is said to be metaphorical; e.g., (a) "These words cut me to the heart." A single word or expression used metaphorically is said to be a metaphor; e.g., the word cut in example a and the italicized words in the following sentences are metaphors: (b) "He poured out a flood of eloquence." (c) "That is a knotty problem." — An explicit statement that a person or thing or fact is like another is a simile; e.g., (d) "The enemy are fleeing like frightened rabbits." — Metaphor and simile both show resemblance, — metaphor by suggestion or implication, simile by explicit statement (usually by the use of like, as, seem, or some other such word). For this reason any metaphor may be changed to a simile, and vice versa. The metaphors in a, b, and c, above, may be changed to similes thus: (a) "On hearing these words, I felt as if I had been cut to the heart." (b) "Eloquence seemed to pour like a flood from his lips." (c) "It is as difficult to deal with that problem as it is to saw a knotty log." And the simile in example d may be changed to a metaphor thus: (d) "The enemy are fleeing — the frightened rabbits!"

Mode. A mode of a verb is that set of inflectional forms and verb-phrases which a speaker uses to represent the action of the verb in a certain mode (i.e., manner). The set which he uses to represent the action as a fact is the indicative mode; that which he uses to represent the action as doubtful, the subjunctive mode; that which he uses to represent the action as conditioned on something, the conditional mode; that which he uses to represent the action as permitted or possible, the potential mode; that which he uses to represent the action as obligatory, the obligative mode; that which he uses in giving a command, the imperative mode; that which he uses when he employs the verb as a substantive, the infinitive mode (the forms constituting this mode are called some infinitives and others gerunds); that which he uses when he employs the verb as an adjective, the participial mode (the forms constituting this mode are called participles). The indicative, subjunctive, conditional, potential, obligative, and imperative modes are called finite modes; the others, non-finite modes. (See also Indicative, Infinitive, Gerund, and Participle.) The different modes of a typical verb are shown on pages 213 ff.<sup>1</sup>

Modifier. See Modify.

Modify. A word which, by being combined in discourse with another word or expression, is made to mean something different from what it would mean if it stood alone, is said to be modified by that other word or expression. Thus, the meaning of the sentence "I dislike oranges" is changed if we insert sour, so that the sentence reads "I dislike sour oranges"; it is changed because "sour oranges" means something different from "oranges"; "sour" is therefore said to modify (i.e., change) "oranges." Likewise "many men" and "few men" mean something different from "men"; "many" and "few" modify "men." "Call softly" means something different from "call"; "softly" modifies "call." "I hate women who use slang" means something different from "I hate women"; "who use slang" modifies "women." A word or expression which thus changes the meaning of another word is called a modifier. — The modifiers of substantives are adjectives (including participles), adjective phrases, adjective clauses, appositives, and substantives in the possessive case. The modifiers of adjectives, verbs, and adverbs are adverbs, adverb-phrases, adverbial clauses, and adverbial substantives. Vocatives and absolute phrases may be considered modifiers of predication.

Monosyllabic. See Monosyllable.

Monosyllable. A word of one syllable (e.g., word, one, stop, strength) is said to be a monosyllable, or to be monosyllabic.

Nominative. See Case.

Noun. See Substantive.

Number. When a substantive is in an inflectional form which shows that one person or thing is designated (e.g., boy, boy's), it is said to be in the singular number; when in an inflectional form which shows that more than one person or thing are designated (e.g., boys, boys') it is said to be in the plural number. The forms constituting the singular and plural numbers of typical nouns and of the principal inflected pronouns are shown in the ta-

<sup>1</sup> The classification of certain verb-phrases as the conditional mode, the potential mode, and the obligative mode has been adopted here and in the paradigm on pp. 213 ff., upon considerations which seem to me to outweigh the objections that may properly be made on philological grounds. These considerations are stated in Whitney's Essentials of English Grammar, pp. 120 ff., particularly 126; and MacEwan's The Essentials of the English Sentence, p. 53.

bles under Substantive. When a verb is in an inflectional form properly used with a singular subject (e.g., am, was, takes, goest), the verb is said to be in the singular number; when in a form properly used with a plural subject (e.g., are, were, take, go), it is said to be in the plural number. (See pages 213 ff.)

Object. A substantive used in connection with a verb and designating the person or thing upon whom or which the action of the verb is represented as taking effect is called the object of the verb. In the following sentences the italicized words are the objects of the respective verbs: "I built a house," "I wrote a letter," "Whom do you wish?" A substantive that designates the person or thing directly affected by the action of a verb (as the objects in the foregoing examples do) is called a direct object; one that designates the person or thing indirectly affected is called an indirect object; e.g., the italicized words in the sentences following: "I built my wife a house," "I wrote him a letter." — Regarding the object of a preposition, see Preposition.

Objective. See Case.

Part of speech. A part of speech is a body of words all of which perform the same function in discourse. The parts of speech generally recognized by grammarians, as the classes into which all words in the English language are divided, are eight in number; viz., nouns, pronouns, adjectives, verbs, adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections.

Participle. The word participle as ordinarily used means a verb-form like moving or moved, when that form is used with the value of an adjective, as in "We are moving today," "The piano has been moved." For further information, see Gerund, Mode, and Verb.

Passive. See Voice.

Past tense. See Tense.

Past-perfect. See Tense.

Perfect. See Tense.

Person. The words I (with its inflectional forms, — me, we, etc.; see the tables under Substantive), myself, ourselves, and the relative who, when its antecedent is one of the foregoing words, are called pronouns of the first person. The words thou (with its inflectional forms, — thee, you, etc.; see Substantive), thyself, yourself, yourselves, and the relative who, when its antecedent is one of the foregoing words, are called pronouns of the second person. The relative who, when used otherwise than as above mentioned, all other pronouns than those above mentioned, and all nouns, are said to belong to the third person. — A verb-form or verb-phrase that may correctly be used with a subject in the first person is said to belong to the first person of the verb (e.g., am, are bound); one that may correctly be used with a subject in the second person is said to belong to the second person of the verb (e.g., art, hast gone); one that may correctly be used with a subject in the third person is said to belong to the third person of the verb (e.g., is, does, has gone). (See pages 213 ff.) — Discourse is said to be in the first person when the speaker designates himself by pronouns of the first person (e.g., the Twenty-third Psalm); in the second person when the speaker addresses some person or thing, using pronouns of the second person (e.g., the Lord's Prayer); in the third person when neither pronouns of the first person nor pronouns of the second person are used (e.g., the first two letters on page 136).

Personal pronouns. The words I, thou, he, she, and it, together with their inflectional forms (see the tables under Substantive) are called personal pronouns.

Phrase. The term phrase is often used to mean any short group of words; as "the slang phrase 'That's hard lines.' " But as the term is used in grammar, a phrase is a group of words not constituting or containing a predication. A verb-phrase is a combination of a principal verb and one or more auxiliaries that is analogous to a single inflectional form (e.g., has gone, shall have done). A preposition-phrase is a combination of words analogous to a single preposition (e.g., in regard to, as for). An adjective-phrase is a phrase used to modify a substantive (e.g., "A machine of great value"). An adverb-phrase is a phrase used analogously to an adverb (e.g., "He fell into the water"). Any phrase consisting of a preposition and its object is a prepositional phrase (a term not to be confused with preposition-phrase); e.g., the adjective and adverb phrases above quoted are prepositional phrases. A participial phrase is a phrase consisting of a participle and its adjuncts (e.g., "Looking to the north, I saw the lake"). A gerund-phrase is a prepositional phrase in which the preposition governs a gerund (e.g., in talking, instead of shooting). Concerning absolute phrases, see Absolute.

Plural. See Number.

Possessive adjective. The words my, mine, our, ours, thy, thine, your, yours, his, her, hers, its, their, theirs, and whose are called possessive adjectives, or possessives, as well as inflectional forms of the personal pronouns.

Possessive case. See Case.

Predicate. See Subject.

Predicate adjective. See Predicate substantive.

Predicate complement. See Predicate substantive.

Predicate substantive. A substantive designating what a verb asserts a person or thing to be, is a predicate substantive (e.g., "He is a carpenter," "These are strawberries"). An adjective designating a quality which a verb asserts belongs to a person or thing is a predicate adjective (e.g., "He is skillful," "These berries are sweet"). A predicate substantive, or a predicate adjective, or a phrase or clause used as the one or the other, is said to be the predicate complement of the verb it completes.

Predication. Any group of words consisting of a single subject and predicate, whether a simple sentence or a clause.

Preposition. A word used to show the relation of a substantive to another word; e.g., in, on, into, toward, from, for, against, of, between, with, without, within, before, behind, under, over, above, among, at, by, around, about, through, throughout, beyond, across, along, beside. A preposition always requires to complete its meaning a substantive, with which it combines into what is felt to be a unit of expression; e.g., "in the water," "into the house," "among the leaves," "behind the house." This fact distinguishes prepositions from adverbs, which do not require a substantive to complete them; e.g., "Go out," "Come in," "Please walk before." (In, before, on, for, but, across, and many other English words belong each one to several parts of speech; there is a preposition across and an adverb across, a preposition for and a conjunction for, etc.) For the distinction between prepositions and conjunctions, see Conjunction. The substantive combined with a preposition in the manner illustrated above is called the object of the preposition.

Preposition-phrase. See Phrase.

Prepositional phrase. See Phrase.

Present. See Tense.

Principal clause. See Clause.

Principal parts. The principal parts of any verb are (1) the present infinitive, (2) the past first singular, and (3) the past participle (see Verb); e.g., flee, fled, fled; choose, chose, chosen; love, loved, loved; set, set, set.

Principal verb. A verb not used as an auxiliary, including the auxiliaries themselves when they are used independently (e.g., "I have a boat," "He did wonders").

Pronoun. See Substantive.

Proper name. See Common noun.

Proper noun. See Common noun.

Relative adjectives. See Relative pronoun.

Relative clause. See Adjective clause.

Relative pronoun. The words that, who, what, which, whoever, whatever, and whichever, when they are used as substantives and in such a way that the clauses in which they stand are made adjective clauses (q.v.), are called relative pronouns. The words what, which, whatever, and whichever, when they are used as adjectives and in such a way that the clauses in which they stand are made adjective clauses, are called relative adjectives.

Rhetoric. See Grammar.

Sentence. The word sentence means (1) a group of words composed of a subject (with or without adjuncts) and a predicate (with or without adjuncts) and not grammatically dependent on any words outside itself (e.g., "I will go," "I, being the person best acquainted with the situation, will go as soon as the carriage which I ordered has come"); or (2) two or more such groups joined by coördinating conjunctions or presented in such a way as to show that they are to be taken as a unit. A sentence of type 2 is called a compound sentence. Sentences of type 1 are divided into two classes, — simple sentences and complex sentences. All sentences are therefore usually said to fall into three classes, simple, complex, and compound. These are described in this vocabulary under their several names.

Sentence-element. A subject, a predicate, a predicate substantive or adjective, an absolute phrase, a modifier, a clause, or any other unit of sentence-structure. Any sentence-element other than a principal clause falls under the term subordinate sentence-element, as used in this book.

Sign of the infinitive. See Infinitive.

Simile. See Metaphor.

Simple conjunction. See Conjunction.

Simple sentence. A sentence composed of only one subject and predicate and not containing a dependent clause; e.g., "He seized the hammer," "Taking off his coat and rolling up his sleeves, he seized the heavy sledge-hammer in his strong hands, swung it high above his head, and brought it down with irresistible force, shattering to pieces the priceless cabinet, the heirloom handed down through five generations."

Singular. See Number.

Subject. A substantive combined in discourse with a verb (except a gerund or a participle) and representing the person or thing regarding which the verb asserts something is called the subject of the verb; and the verb, in turn, is called the predicate of the substantive, or is said to be predicated of the substantive. Thus, in the expression "He goes," "he" is the subject of "goes," and "goes" is the predicate of "he." The words subject and predicate are often (in this book and elsewhere) used to designate respectively a subject and a predicate, as above defined, together with any adjuncts they may have. Thus in the sentence "The ploughman homeward plods his weary way," the phrase "the ploughman" may be said to be the subject and the phrase "homeward plods his weary way" the predicate; or the noun "ploughman" alone may be said to be the subject and the verb "plods" the predicate.

Subjunctive. See Mode and also Indicative.

Subordinate clause. See Clause.

Subordinate sentence-element. See Sentence-element.

Substantive. A substantive is a word by which, as by a name, some person or thing is called; e.g., man, house, happiness, beauty, song, speech, Jupiter, Charlemagne, he, she. A few substantives are called pronouns; these are as follows: I, thou, he, she, it, and their compounds ending in self or selves; this, that; who, what, which, whether, and their compounds ending in ever, or soever; each, either, neither, some, any, many, few, all, both, ought, naught, such, other, one, none, and a few others. The pronouns are divided into five classes: personal, demonstrative, interrogative, relative, and indefinite pronouns (see these headings in the Vocabulary). All substantives other than pronouns are called nouns. — The declension of typical nouns and of the principal pronouns that are inflected is shown in the following tables:

DECLENSION OF NOUNS

	Singular	Plural
Nom.	boy	boys
Poss.	boy's	boys'
Obj.	boy	boys
Nom.	man	men
Poss.	man's	men's
Obj.	man	men

DECLENSION OF PRONOUNS

	Singular	Plural
Nom.	I	we
Poss.	my, mine	our, ours
Obj.	me	us

	Singular	Plural
Nom.	thou	ye, you
Poss.	thy, thine	your, yours
Obj.	thee	you
Nom.	he	they
Poss.	his	their, theirs
Obj.	him	them
Nom.	she	they
Poss.	her, hers	their, theirs
Obj.	her	them
Nom.	it	they
Poss.	its	their, theirs
Obj.	it	them
Nom.	who	who
Poss.	whose	whose
Obj.	whom	whom

A substantive may be used syntactically in the following ways (which are explained in this Vocabulary under the appropriate headings): (1) as a subject, (2) as a predicate substantive, (3) as an appositive, (4) as a possessive substantive, (5) as the object of a verb, (6) as the object of a preposition, (7) as an adverbial substantive, and (8) as an absolute substantive.

Substantive clause. A clause may be used as the subject of a verb (e.g., "That he is a scholar is certain"); as the object of a verb (e.g., "I know that he is a scholar"); as the object of a preposition (e.g., "There is no doubt as to whether he is a scholar"); as a predicate substantive (e.g., "The truth is that he is a scholar"); as an appositive (e.g., "This is certain, — that he is a scholar"); as an adverbial substantive (e.g., "I am sure that he is a scholar"); and as an absolute substantive (e.g., "Granted that he is a scholar, he may yet be mistaken"). A clause used in one of these ways is a substantive clause.

Superlative. See Comparison.

Syntactic. See Syntax.

Syntax. The relations that words, when they are combined in discourse, bear to one another (e.g., the relation of "he" to "goes" in the sentence "He goes," or of "carpenter" to "Nelson," in the sentence "Nelson, the carpenter, is here") are called syntactic relations, or collectively syntax. Syntactic relations comprise (1) the relations a single word may bear to another word or to a group of words (e.g., the relation of a subject to a verb, of an adjective to a substantive, of a noun to an adjective-phrase, of a vocative substantive to a sentence); and (2) the relations a predication may bear to another predication (viz., the relation between a principal and a dependent clause and the relation between coördinate clauses).

Tense. The several sets of forms and combinations that a verb has when it represents action as occurring at different points of time are called its tenses. Of these sets there are six, called respectively the present tense, the past tense, the future tense, the perfect tense, the past-perfect tense, and the future-perfect tense. The tenses of a typical verb are shown on pages 213 ff.

Transitive. A verb representing an action that necessarily affects some person or thing in such a way that the name of that person or thing may be made the direct object of the verb, is called a transitive verb; e.g., love, hate, have, carry, build. A verb representing an action of such a kind that a direct object cannot logically be used with the verb is called an intransitive verb; e.g., stand, arise, be, come, whimper, bark, quarrel. Many verbs may be used either transitively or intransitively; e.g., "The fire burns brightly" ("burns" is intransitive); "He burns the paper" ("burns" is transitive); "The corn has grown" ("has grown" is intransitive); "He has grown a beard" ("has grown" is transitive).

Verb. A word used to assert an action, a condition, or the undergoing of an action; e.g., stand, strike, choose, be, become, remain, suffer, undergo.

The various inflections and combinations (see Voice, Mode, Tense, Person, and Number) of a typical verb are shown in the table on pages 213-218. The words I, thou, he, we, you, they, and if are inserted merely to show the way in which the forms they precede are used; they should not be regarded as necessary parts of those forms, for they are not parts at all. Words inclosed in parentheses are variants of the words they follow.

Vocative substantive. A substantive used in direct address. See Direct address.

Voice. A verb is said to be in the active voice when it asserts that the person or thing represented by the subject is, does, or undergoes something; e.g., "He strikes," "He heard," "I see." A verb is said to be in the passive voice when it asserts that something is done to the person or thing represented by the subject; e.g., "He is struck," "He was heard," "I am seen." With one exception all the passive forms of any verb are composed of the several forms of the auxiliary to be, and the past participle of the principal verb; the one exception is the past participle itself. See the table opposite.

Vowel. The letters a, e, i, o, and u are vowels. The letters b, c, d, f, g, h, j, k, l, m, n, p, q, r, s, t, v, x, and z are consonants. W when used as in weak, and y when used as in young, are consonants; w when used as in how, and y when used as in try are vowels.

APPENDIX C

A List of Words that are often Mispronounced

IN the case of a few words in the following list, pronunciations different from those indicated in the right-hand column are admitted by some authorities ; these words are marked with an asterisk (*). The pronunciations given opposite such words are those favored by the great majority of lexicographers. In the case of all the words not marked with an asterisk, the pronunciations indicated are the only correct ones.

The accentual and diacritical marks are not intended to give an exhaustive description of the pronunciation of each word, but only to point out common errors. Of the signs that are not self-explanatory the meanings are shown in the following table :
